The Answer

Why 3 Insurance Companies Have Stopped Writing Policies Here

By Dan Rattiner

Most people on the East End have reacted with shock at the prospect of losing their homeowners insurance. Four months ago, Allstate announced that it would cease writing new policies on eastern Long Island. Then last week, two more insurance companies, MetLife and Nationwide, announced that they too would no longer be writing new insurance policies.

The reason? According to the official press releases from these companies, the East End is at high risk. People ask — at high risk for WHAT? We have been hit by hurricanes, but we haven't been hit by anything major in seventy years, and even that one, bad as it was, caused damage that took only a short time to clean up. Tornadoes? Haven't had any. Tidal wave? No. Earthquakes? Nope. Disastrous floods? Not ever. Devastating fire? Well, we had a fire ten years ago, and we thought it was pretty big, but it only resulted in the loss of one house in Westhampton Beach. Before that? Nothing.

So what is it? Some people say that the insurance companies are targeting the East End for exactly the fact that we HAVEN'T had a devastating catastrophic event. We're DUE, they say. Well, this is ridiculous. An ingenious argument, but ridiculous nevertheless.

And so, we tried calling up the insurance companies to get to the bottom of this. We called all three of the insurance companies pulling out and we got the exact same treatment. They gave us a "reference number" for our phone call, and then they transferred us to someone who could help but the call got disconnected. When we called back, we were asked for our claim number, which turned out to be our reference number. We now have three different claims with three different insurance companies, none of whom do we have any policies with. But then we got a call from the insurance company we DO have our policy with saying that we were now going to be "reviewed." We had filed too many claims.

> We now have three different claims with three different insurance companies, none of whom do we have any policies with.

Later in the day, we finally DID get a call back from one of the three insurance companies who is pulling out of the east end, and they told us the real reason they are pulling out is because of some signs that have been put up by the State Highway Department. These signs alarmed them.

"What signs are they?" I asked.

"They are everywhere on the Montauk Highway, the main road on the East End. They read COASTAL EVACUATION ROUTE."

"What have these signs got to do with anything?"

"Periodically, we send out inspectors to drive around an area. There are big EVACUATION ROUTE signs every three hundred yards along the Montauk Highway for fifty miles."

"I still don't get it."

"What does the East End need to be evacuated FROM?"

"I have no idea."

"Oh, come on. You know, we insurance companies get people who dance around the truth about things all the time. There is something very big and very terrible out there that needs an evacuation route. We need to know what it is. Until we find out, no new policies. And that's the story."

"I have no idea why these signs were put up. The people in Albany decided we ought to have them. Some sign company they were paying

Reserving a Town Park Every Weekend All Summer in East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

As the percentage of Hispanic people in our community increases, the culture of this community changes. Hispanic food stores open. Bilingual newspapers start publishing. And new public parks are built and others reconfigured to accommodate the growing desire for soccer and volleyball, the games of choice for many of our new Hispanic residents.

As an American newspaper publisher, I have watched with a certain pride at how this has all happened so peacefully and with such sensitivity, particularly on the part of our local town officials. All you have to do is look around to see what has been done. It has been particularly impressive when you consider that our federal government has been clearly so negligent in failing to create a proper legal structure for the arrival of this present wave of immigrants. Business leaders want these millions of immigrants to take low paying jobs to keep America competitive with the rest of the world. So the feds look the other way and let them cross our borders unimpeded. The results are that the local community has to deal with their being here, like it or not. Frankly, the local community, under these remarkable circumstances where many here do not have the proper paperwork, has been very forthcoming in creating facilities for them as best they can.

Now, however, there has been a very troubling development. It happened last week. And I am not talking about the demonstrations in favor of making citizens out of these immigrants and I am not talking about demonstrations in favor of deporting those here without papers — these are proper ways to express opinions.

Last week in East Hampton, a group of Hispanics applied to the town to get permission to use one of the new soccer fields on Steven Hands Path — many different groups apply for these permits — and they didn't get it. It was an outrageous application. They wanted the exclusive use of the field every Saturday and Sunday all day every week from April to November. And they wanted to have 300 people on the premises. Others who had applied before them and already had permission to use these fields on particular days should be swept away. That others who had already gotten permission included children and other Hispanics didn't matter to this new group of applicants.

When the permission was denied, they went public. There were press conferences held, and there were angry appearances on television, including News 12. Denying this application was a clear blow to the rights of Hispanics. The denial of the application of the East Hampton Soccer Association for this time on this field was discrimination. "These people have a right to enjoy their sports," said Sandra Dunn, a spokeswoman for the Organizacion Latino Americana of Eastern Long Island. "They certainly are making this league jump through a lot of hoops. It's always been this way and it needs to change."

> After the rejection, the Town Supervisor, Bill McGintee, invited the applicants back suggesting they return with a scaled down request.

It is not discrimination. After the rejection, the Town Supervisor, Bill McGintee, invited the applicants back suggesting they return with a scaled down request. The facility had to be shared. But they would work it out so that their organization would be able to spend some time there.

The danger here is that the public outrage expressed over the denial of this application — clearly the scope of the application is way beyond what would be fair to others — is going to do nothing but polarize the community. There are those who DO want to discriminate against Hispanics. But they are a small minority. This is going to get them all riled up. And this is not good. There are very clear dangers here.

I have just returned from a vacation in South Africa. I have been writing about it. Let me tell you where this can lead.

Half a century ago, the white government of South Africa, so determined to deny the native Africans the opportunities and fruits of the modern world that they had brought to that continent, passed terrible laws to restrict black activity. They created white areas and black areas. If you were a black person, you could not be in a white area unless you had written permission to do so. You had to carry an identification card. You had to show you were either on your way to your job or coming home from your job. You couldn't spend the night in the white area without a special card. If you didn't have the proper card, you got arrested.

By 1955, there were so many of these laws in effect that the daily application of these laws became a way of life. And there were nuances. People from India said they should not be treated in the same draconian way the whites were treating the blacks. They were not black. So now there were cards for a group called "coloreds." In public places at a certain time, there was a rainbow of bathrooms for the different uses of different groups and sexes.

In 1976, the government, finding that there were not enough enforcement officers to keep all this straight, appealed to the blacks. If you were a black person and you did not have a proper card for where you were, you were to turn yourself in to the local police station so you could be arrested.

The blacks seized on this and asked all illegal blacks in the community to, on a certain day, descend on the police stations and demand to be arrested. It actually happened. Hundreds of thousands of people did this. And in the confusion blacks were shot and killed. It was terrible. It led to ten years of brutal repression. And it took nearly a generation to sort itself out.

You think this sort of thing cannot happen here? In South Africa, the government, influenced by events, led the citizenry into a place that in the end sickened the international community, bankrupted the country, and resulted in their overthrow by a black population which outnumbered the whites by 10 to 1 and should have been in charge in the first place.

Surely, you might say, if any country today is composed of good and compassionate people it is here in America. Look how today so many foreign people want to come here. It is not just the economy. It is that we are a nation of immigrants — we ALL came here as foreigners — and we know the story. And we have freedom.

You want to see the bad apples — we do have them — get a little traction? Just apply for you and your 300 friends to take over a public park to the exclusion of others as if it were your own for half a year, and when your application is denied, go public and complain in the media that you are being discriminated against.

That'll do it.

Overarching this is the need for a coherent immigration policy. My personal belief is that we ought to find a structured path to citizenship for those already here, and an enforced but compassionate system for future immigration to this country that would embrace those wishing either for citizenship or guest working relationships.

Washington should set a goal and a time frame for the adoption of it. •

Penguins?

Look, Up in the Sky, It's a Bird, It's a Penguin, It's a Piping Plover!

By Dan Rattiner

The piping plovers should be arriving in the Hamptons any day now. Flapping away on their tiny endangered wings, they will be arriving here two by two, pushed by the jet stream up from their winter homes down south, and when they arrive, they will look down and see our pristine beaches below which will appear, as always, just right for them to land upon, build a nest and start a family.

Our local beachfront property owners await the piping plovers with bated breath. Where will they land? Somewhere inside their little tiny pea brains they will shortly make a decision. If it is on your beach — and the chances are about one in a hundred it will be — the beach will be off limits to you, because piping plovers are an endangered species and must be protected from the likes of you. Tiptoe to within 50 feet of a piping plover nest, stop and clear your throat, and the piping plovers may be so frightened they forget to reproduce. What an environmental disaster. Or if they have already reproduced, the clearing of your throat could cause them to forget they are supposed to be sitting upon the plover eggs so they hatch. You get the idea. But don't worry, the piping plovers will be leaving just before the end of summer. You will be able to go swimming in the sea for at least one day.

In this context, I thought it might be of interest to tell you a story about what has happened at a particular beach we visited in South Africa last month. This is a beach just east of Capetown named "Boulders" on account of the huge boulders that jut out from the sand every few hundred yards. It extends in a great arc for about one mile and is a popular spot for sunbathing and swimming — or was a popular spot for those activities.

About a year ago, an entire colony of penguins, thousands of them, a species completely unknown to the mainland of Africa, swam onto this beach from some small island out at sea —

BATTLE FOR CONTROL OF SYNAGOGUE CONTINUES

By Dan Rattiner

With the legal battle for control of the Jewish Center of the Hamptons having been won by the Board of that institution, the ground has now shifted. Beginning last week, the unofficial group of congregants supporting the Rabbi, has started an action to remove the existing board.

Describing it as "dysfunctional," congregant Leonard Gordon released the news that his group, an unofficial organization called the Committee to Save the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, has obtained a temporary injunction against the Board. The Board, which intends to let the present rabbi's contract run out in June, will not be allowed to implement that decision until after a hearing on May 8. At that time, both sides will appear before a New York State Supreme Court Appellate Division Judge to state their cases. And it will then be determined whether the temporary injunction against the Board can be made into a permanent injunction or whether the removal can proceed.

While this attempt to stop the process of removing the rabbi goes ahead, it is also the intention of the Committee to Save the Jewish Center of the Hamptons at this time to replace the existing Board of Directors with people who will agree to keep Rabbi Gelfand as the spiritual leader of that institution. To do this, they will have to get the congregation to rise up and insist that happen in a series of congregation-wide votes.

They will need 25% of the congregation to vote to petition the board to hold a special meeting. Then, if the meeting is called — and it is not legally certain that a 25% vote would cause the existing board to ACCEPT the idea of holding a meeting since it could result in their removal — they will need a vote of 67% of the congregation to vote to change the constitution so the control of the place can be removed from the Board and no one knows quite which one — and opened a new colony. They dig holes. They construct nests. And they chatter at one another constantly in a unique sort of hee haw noise. They are the great, endangered jackass penguins.

Now on the hillside at the back of this beach live some of the wealthier residents of Capetown, people who through hard work have amassed enough money to build a fine home with glass sliders and decks that overlook this beach where, up until this past year, their family members could sunbathe.

That is not the case today. There is a chain link fence that runs at the back of the beach for its full one-mile length to separate the residents from the jackass penguins. In other words, the residents no longer have access to the beach.

Specifically what has happened is that the government of South Africa, considering the penguins at Boulders to be a great boon to the otherwise stumbling tourist industry as in VISIT CAPETOWN AND SEE THE PENGUINS, has declared the beach to be a state park. On the beach side of the chain link fence and running along its full length is now a lovely elevated boardwalk. Tourists can come to Boulders, pay the equivalent of $8 to buy a ticket at a state-run booth at either end of the boardwalk, and for this money walk along it listening to the hee haw of the penguins and taking pictures of them. The boardwalk is about five feet up.

I might note that at the eastern end of Boulders, for a distance of about a hundred yards, the penguins have been rousted out — imagine that — so that the beach can be used by humans, mostly the humans from the homes on the hillside. It's something. But it's a long walk. Other than that, the residents sit out on their decks and by day listen to the chatter of the tourists walking excitedly along the boardwalk and by night listen to the hee haw of the jackass penguins, which signs note are, although endangered, the third largest penguin in the world. Well, it's a life. And maybe some day the penguins will move off.

It was as we drove into the parking lot at the most westerly end of this park that I saw one of the most wonderful signs I have ever seen in a tourist area. The parking lot has a number of booths around it where enterprising people have set up small wooden stands to sell snacks or soda or postcards or souvenirs. On one of these booths there is a large sign with two words on it. One word is just above a large arrow pointing one way. The other word is just about a large arrow pointing the other way. The words are BUSES (arrow pointing west) and PENGUINS (arrow pointing east.)

I did think that somewhere nearby they might have had a third arrow pointing north and slightly upward. It could read PISSED OFF RESIDENTS. •

off, I think. We think it's a blemish on the landscape and a total waste of money. They have been up for five years. We hate them. Everybody who comes here has to go on the Montauk Highway to get here. It's the only road. So if it's the only road in, it's also the only road out. How stupid could this be?"

"I don't have time for this elaborate story. Just tell me what the fear is."

"I don't know. Locusts? Red Tide? A Nuclear plant in Connecticut? Ticks? I swear, I have no idea."

"We'll enter these ideas in your file. And when you want to get serious about this, call us."

"Okay," I said.

So that's the story. •

given to the Congregation and further that the contract of the rabbi be renewed. The wording of the renewal of the rabbi's contract seems to indicate it is a virtual lifetime contract unless a majority of the congregation votes otherwise.

In other words, the control of the Jewish Center would pass to the Congregation itself. A new Board would be constituted, but it would have very limited powers in making meaningful decisions regarding the Jewish Center.

This whole situation has spun wildly out of control. And it seems to have really been entirely unnecessary. It came to pass last summer when several clergymen and employees at the Jewish Center came to the Board to complain that the rabbi was abusive to them and that the Board needed to do something about it. At least one longtime employee said they would not stay if the rabbi did. (And now it's been announced that Associate Rabbi Alon Levkovitz is leaving to take a position at Temple Beth Am in Jupiter, Florida.) The Board looked into the matter. In addition they found some ethical and financial questions that needed to be addressed. Nothing huge, actually. But things that needed to be acknowledged and done differently. They called the Rabbi in — he is a popular rabbi — and asked him to respond to what they had found.

Rabbi Gelfand

The next thing that happened was that a meeting of the general congregation took place at the synagogue "to show our support" of the rabbi at which times it was voted unanimously, around 650 to 0, that they did not want him removed for whatever transgressions there were. He was their rabbi and they loved him. He had not answered the questions put to him to the Board's satisfaction at that time.

Thus were battle lines drawn.

In late December, with much but not all of the information about the allegations in the hands of the Congregants, another informal vote was taken by the congregation, at which time about 2/3 of the congregation voted in favor of the rabbi and 1/3 against.

Also in December, responses to the Boards questions started trickling in, though not from the rabbi himself. The board, stung at being treated as if they had no business looking into these matters, had by that time gone public with the transgressions. And things had gone on from there.

This reporter has looked into all the allegations and explanations about the rabbi. You know what? You'd have to be Solomon to know where the truth lies. At the Committee to Save the Jewish Center website, www.savejcoh.org, you can read the allegations and explanations, though whether the allegations printed on the congregation's website match what the Board says they are, is not guaranteed. And what do you make of this acknowledgement by the congregation on their website? About the charges of abuse, lawyers for the rabbi address it by saying that "Rabbi Gelfand has high standards and others may view them as demanding." So does it cross the line?

There is no sense in trying to resolve this matter in this way. Only one of two things is going to happen. Here they are.

After more legal maneuverings, a judge will interpret the Synagogue's constitution in one way or another and one side will win and the other side will lose. It seems clear at this point that if this is how this all plays out, the result could well be TWO synagogues. Maybe the two will occupy the same piece of land side by side, one in the old building, one in the new. One with the present rabbi and one with a new rabbi.

The other thing that could happen is that the two sides simply decide to give up fighting and instead try conciliation. There could be no more talking about the past. The rabbi apologizes for behavior unbecoming or at least behavior that others might have interpreted as unbecoming. The board accepts his apology and extends his contract temporarily for one year during which time they see if the behavior modifies. And the terms of the members of the Board (which voted 19 to 2 to replace the rabbi) are also extended for an extra year. They could vote again. The rabbi stays (for now) and the board's control of the situation is acknowledged.

Will it happen? Who knows? Meanwhile, the clock is ticking, not only because the June 30 contract looms, but because during this past year financial contributions to this warring congregation — which still shows up to pray every Friday night together — have badly dried up. •

The cast of "The Guide House: Montauk"

Montauk Reality

Montauk Fishing Guides, Anglers, and Fish on ESPN2 Every Weekend

By David Lion Rattiner

Once again, the Hamptons and television executives have climbed into bed together. But this time around, the town in the Hamptons featured is known for keeping the outside world out and locals in. That's right, Montauk is on ESPN 2. In an even more rare appearance, Montauk fishermen are the stars of the show. The show truly brings to reality the old Montauk expression, "Montauk: A quaint little drinking village with a big fishing problem."

The new show is called "Guide House Montauk" and it aired last Sunday and will continue to air every Sunday through June 4. The show is a reality based television show that chronicles fall fishing out in Montauk. If there is going to be a fishing show that is interesting to people that aren't fishermen, this show is it.

Brendan McCarthy, co-creator of the show and a Montauk fishing guide, came up with the idea with some friends.

"I got the idea three years ago when I was having dinner with a bunch of the other guides out in Montauk. We were all drinking and arguing and ragging on one another and it just hit me how much of a bunch of characters all of us are. I thought, man I really need to get some cameras in here."

Which is exactly what Brendan did. He, along with one of his fishing clients, Jason Puris, who produced the television show "Growing Up Gotti," ran the show by ESPN 2 and they became interested. They told them to write up a script.

"Originally, we were supposed to be ten guides, but then we knocked it down to five. After that, they gave us some money and we starting shooting it," says McCarthy.

The show not only is drawing fishing fans. The reason is the competition that exists between fishermen during the fall season. This competitiveness drives a lot of drama in the show, causing altercations between the

SAGAPONACK AND SOUTHAMPTON AGREE

By David Stoll

Just before the proverbial "midnight," the Town of Southampton and the Village of Sagaponack reached agreement by which the town will provide municipal services to the new village. This agreement obviates the need for the new village to impose a one-time special tax assessment to fund operations for the second half of the year.

The cliff-hanger had not been anticipated, in light of the reasons for the creation of this new village. To prevent Dunehampton Village from coming into existence, the residents of Sagaponack voted to make their hamlet into a "bare-bones" village that would be separate from the Southampton Township only in name. The village would continue to rely on the town for all major services, including police, highways and even planning and zoning. It was on this basis that the voters agreed to incorporate, and it was on this basis that a slate of Trustees and Mayor Bill Tillotson were elected. Residents of Southampton Township were only too happy to oblige, as the alternative was to have the beachfront homes of Water Mill, Bridgehampton and Sagaponack sliced out of the town.

But the best laid plans of mice and men often go awry.

A couple of basics will be helpful here. Under State law, Sagaponack was required to adopt its first budget by Monday, May 1. That budget will go into effect on June 1. Further, State law mandates that the town continue to provide police services for a new village, unless the village instructs the town not to do so. On the other hand, all other services as of June 1 are to be the responsibility of Sagaponack, unless the village and the town can reach an agreement by which the town will continue to provide those services. Finally, whatever decisions are made concerning provision of services, the Southampton Town Code must remain in effect without amendment as the village code for a period of one year following incorporation.

The first problem arose several weeks ago, when concerns were raised about Sagaponack's potential liability for improper Zoning Board of Appeals decisions made by the Southampton Town ZBA with respect to Sagaponack Village residents. Suddenly, it seemed that Sagaponack would need its own ZBA and, most likely for that reason, its own Planning Board. Zoning is usually the driving force when a new village is created, but in this case, the residents wanted to remain part of the Southampton community. Those issues appear to have been addressed. At least for the time being, Sagaponack Village is prepared to rely upon the Southampton Town ZBA.

fishing guides and sometimes even their clients. Not to mention that all of them are a bunch of Montauk fishing characters. The show was filmed from September through November of 2005.

Fishing out in Montauk is a way of life for both tourists and locals in the summer. But the fall is a little bit more hardcore, especially for the locals because the fish are running tougher and the weather is a little bit colder. However, you can't really tell that it is cold out when you watch the show, so the shots of the bay in Montauk, with very few boats in the background, are sort of a television trick. Nevertheless, it is still very exciting to see a small little village like Montauk appear on an international television network that millions of viewers from around the world will be seeing. It certainly will be good for Montauk tourism.

Brendan and the four other guides in the show, Amanda Switzer, Paul Dixon, Matthew Miller and Bryan Goulart, are among the best fishing guides. All of them have high profile clients that they bring out on their boats to catch the legendary "Fall Run" that Montauk is known for.

The cast of characters in the new show is incredibly different and energetic. If there is one thing for certain about Montauk fishing guides, it is their personalities translate to interesting television. The show has magnificent views of the ever beautiful Montauk and really gives viewers an inside look at the complexities of fishing that makes it so exciting, especially when a tournament, like the Redbone Fishing Tournament in Montauk, is on the line.

"We got some amazing footage. One was of some deer swimming across the inlet," says McCarthy.

Probably the biggest dynamic to the show is the fact that all of the guides have to live in the same house together, a trademark for most reality television shows because of the drama that it tends to cause. Just the fact that five Montauk fishing guides are going to live together would be enough for a good reality television show in my book. These guys are known for being friendly but tough. The house that the whole gang stays at during the show is off Soundview Drive in Montauk.

I asked McCarthy about the drama in the show. "Everybody believes that how they run their boat is the right way to run a boat, so that causes some goofy drama. But when you got people out on the water cutting in front of you, running over your fish, you get some pretty entertaining television. At one point an all out fistfight almost breaks out. It gets pretty intense when everyone is fighting for the same fish and the relationship between the client and the fish guide is fantastic."

In the future the producers of the show are hoping to do similar programs in Key Largo and Alaska.

If you want to check out the show, it is airing every Sunday from now until June 4 on ESPN 2 at 10:30 a.m.

You changed our lives.

Before we bought the Marquis Spa from you, our lives were completely boring. My husband was never home, he worked 18 hours a day at his law firm.

To keep busy, I jogged, joined volunteer groups, shopped 'til I dropped.

We never saw each other. It was terrible.

Since you installed the spa, our lives have really changed.

The warm water bubbling from those therapeutic heads completely relaxes us.

Look at this picture. We spent a fortune on different backdrops to fit our every mood. This one is a wooded lake. Another one is a deserted tropical beach. And another is...well it's just too personal to talk about.

Now we spend all of our time together, in our new spa.

Its wonderful... except he stopped going to work and lost his job.

If I can get him out of the spa, can you give him a job?

Entertainment and Science On a Tiny Scale at the Brookhaven Natl. Lab

By Jerry Cimisi

A funny thing happened when I went to Brookhaven National Laboratory (BNL) to see a film presentation on nanoscience: entertainment broke out.

The lab, with its many scientific achievements and a few controversies through the five and half decades of its existence, is becoming a major center for nanoscience, a new field of research and technology that deals with the manipulation, literally, of atoms. Nanoscience is already being done at BNL, but it will really take off upon the completion of the lab's Center for Functional Nanomaterials. Construction began last September; the center should be up and running by early 08.

Ivan K. Schuller, a recognized researcher in nanoscience, was presenting a short introductory film he created (and acted in), called When Things Get Small, at BNL's Berkner Hall. Introduced as "one of the one hundred most-cited physicists worldwide in the last fifteen years." Schuller, a middle-aged energetic man with a German accent, seemed like the perfect scientific authority to bring the layperson into this new — and perhaps strange — arena of scientific endeavor.

He proved to be that, and a bit more. Before the film, Schuller said, "I been asked if it were fun to be a physicist. I said it is as much fun as, but easier than, being an actor," obviously referring to his supporting role in his film.

He added, "As a physicist, you can end up showing one's home movies."

The prefix "nano" means one billionth. A nanometer is a billionth of a meter. It is difficult to comprehend just how minute that is. Nanoscience generally works with materials (though not in the sense of what we think of as materials) 1-100 nanometers wide. To get an idea of how very, very small that is (and small here is a very inadequate word) a human hair is 80,000 nanometers wide.

> In the microworld, particles actually seem to pass right through walls. Smith and Schuller pass through walls, too, but that might be a little bit in the future.

Nanoscience has brought to near possibility the stuff of science fiction: nano robots, or nanobots that can clear out clogged arteries; an increase in the amount of electronic data stored in any given area; and perhaps new methods of energy. Current fuel prices make that a particularly desirable leap into the future.

The audience for Schuller and When Things Get Small was almost exclusively made up of BNL scientists. They had taken an hour off from smashing atoms or nuclear medical research or any number of rigorous scientific labors to hear what this expert in his field had to say. The lab has a continuing series of presentations on different areas of science, which, if open to the public, are generally attended by a scientific crowd. It was a crowd that would be a little taken aback by what followed.

Adam Smith, a young, classically trained actor, took the audience on a journey through the nanoworld, a passage that was hardly academic. The press material for the film had a viewer's quote: "This movie has a "Laugh-In" feel to it." If When Things Get Small has a bit more — a lot more — science than that 60s hit, the comparison was understandable. Schuller meant to introduce nanoscience by being entertaining, and he succeeded.

Smith holds a diminutive elephant in the palm of his hand while Schuller stands by, and that segues into representing the very large

PLANS UNDERWAY FOR POTATOHAMPTON 5K

By Dan Rattiner

The Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon is coming. This year's event will be the 28th annual Potatohampton, a 5k affair that takes place along the back roads in Bridgehampton to kick off the summer season in the Hamptons. The gun sounds to start the race at 9 a.m. on Sunday morning, May 28 on Ocean Road, just 200 yards down from the Monument in Bridgehampton. It ends one hour later when the last stragglers come in. In between is everybody else.

The Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon is the oldest, continuously held running event on Long Island. It pre-dates the Long Island Marathon, it pre-dates the Shelter Island Run. It comes from a time when the New York Marathon consisted of maybe eleven people trying to run 26 miles through traffic in that town. When exercising was pushing a manual lawn mower, digging potatoes or lifting weights sold by Charles Atlas. As for running along in the road, that was for fanatics. Well, we started the race for these fanatics, and the idea was to show them how beautiful the farmland was here in Bridgehampton. You could run through these fields along the narrow farm roads and admire the scenery, the potato fields, and the Berwind Windmill. And the race continues.

For those who have attended races from prior years, please note that this year's race is NOT a 10k. The Race Beneficiary is The Foundation for the Advancement of Cardiac Therapies of Manhattan, headed up by Dr. Mehemet Oz, and the Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center. Barbara Gubbins will be given a Lifetime Achievement Award at this year's race. She has won the women's division in this race more times than any other individual. There will be trophies and ribbons awarded in nine categories, including 13-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59, 60-69,70-79, 80+ and walkers at 10 a.m. We hope you will attend or come to watch the start or the finish, which will take place at the same place as the starting line. Race applications are available at Dan's Papers, and at numerous stores around the Hamptons. We are working to get them in Gubbin Running Ahead in both East Hampton and Southampton, World Gym in Hampton Bays and the Omni in Southampton. The first 200 entrants receive a free t-shirt. All finishers receive a Certificate of Completion. And there are many different gifts, snacks, drinks and services available before the start of the race under a tent in the Bridgehamptons Militia Green on Ocean Road behind One Ocean Restaurant where final registration will be available from 7:30 a.m. to 8:45 a.m. for late-comers on that Sunday morning. Final times for participants will be posted at Dan's Papers for two weeks following the event, and will be available for viewing on our website.

IN PRAISE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

By Isabel Sepulveda-de Scanlon

I feel very lucky to be a bilingual and bicultural person (I wish I had more than two languages and had visited more places in the world, but there IS still time!!!). I feel it gives me the capacity to connect with and understand two cultures. I also feel lucky to live on the East End, where we have a small town atmosphere: people can get to know each other, run into people at places we all know, such as King Kullen, walking down Main Street, or the local hardware store, etc. We have to cherish this atmospheric closeness and protect it from polarization that will only bring negative energy that we don't need or want.

It is wonderful that there is such a place where the "American Dream" is possible, where through education, hard work and clear goals this can be achieved (me confunde esta frase: quiere decir "The 'American Dream' shows us that through education and hard work, our goals can be achieved.") Before the 1600s in this country, the only inhabitants were our native brothers and sisters. In one of life's ironies, centuries later, we Latinos look very much like them. People come here for different reasons. Some come here for the adventure of experiencing a different culture. Others emigrate because they work for international corporations that want highly qualified, bilingual and bicultural executives to become part of their corporate world. Oppression by the ruling social class drives many; social status and your last name play a big role in their future, while others want to escape for political reasons. Corrupt governments cater to special interest groups, failing to empower their citizens. People, often farmers, want a better life for their children. (This also confused me a bit: These workers' lands are being displaced by big agricultural industries controlled by multinationals, many being of American origin.

Corporate America is seeing what the mainstream is not: the buying power of the emerging communities, particularly the Latino community. They are the target of the marketing efforts of companies like Ford, GM, Citibank, Chase and Western Union. More evidence of this phenomenon is that companies like Telemundo, a Spanish-language TV station, is owned by NBC and the newspaper HOY is owned by Newsday. Many radio stations are owned by American companies.

This immigration is so intriguing: we see again young people leaving the places where their grandparents or great-grandparents came from in the Old World, like Spain, Italy, Germany, Syria, Lebanon, Palestine, Yugoslavia, Russia etc., to go to Latin America. Now some are leaving their new countries and going back to Europe, hoping their lives will improve, doing the same search that their ancestors did, but in reverse. I think this is a fascinating process. I see a big part of our East End community as very cosmopolitan and worldly. Just take our surfers leaving during part of the winter going after waves to places like Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Peru, etc.

Now, what can we do in our community so that we don't become polarized, as has happened in some other places?

I think we should have a roundtable where the key players in our community, starting with heads of our local media, our local politicians (Congressmen, Assemblymen, Legislators, Supervisors), heads of the police departments, chiefs of the fire departments, Directors of the Town's Human Services, church leaders, Latinos, Shinnecock, and African-American leaders encouraging the participation of different voices to help us come together and stay together as a community.

Isabel Sepulveda-de Scanlon is editor of the bilingual publication Voz Latina.

Mothering Sunday

3rd Graders in the Remsenberg School Take a Crack at What it All Means

By Janet Berg

You can trace the earliest Mother's Day back to the time of the ancient Greeks, honoring Rhea, the Mother of the Gods, or to the 1600s, when many of England's poor worked as live-in servants for the wealthy and on "Mothering Sunday," were given the day off to bring a special "Mothering Cake" home to their own mothers.

By 1911, Mother's Day was celebrated across America, and in 1914, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed Mother's Day as a national holiday in the United States.

Throughout history and around the globe, children agree mothers are very special people. Indeed, and as one student put it, "I wouldn't even be here if it wasn't for her!"

I thought it would be a sweet idea to ask the 8-year-olds in Mrs. Zeltmann's third grade class at Remsenburg School a few questions about the holiday's origin, and how they plan on celebrating the festivity on May 14th in the year 2006.

Q: WHO PROCLAIMED MOTHER'S DAY AS A NATIONAL HOLIDAY?

A: Robert Lochren III: I have to guess it was MY mom.

A: Ryan Duncan: I'm not sure, but I think it was a Chinese person in 1765.

A: Maximillian Petersen: I know my grandfather was one of the people who started it.

Q: HOW WOULD YOU MAKE A MOTHERING CAKE?

A: Ryan Baker: I'd get a bowl and mix 75% pineapple . . . but, first you have to cut it into little bits, then you add, ummm, let me think about it . . . 3 grams of sugar, ummm ..... we usually just BUY the cake, but if I HAVE to make it myself, I'd get some wheat, turn it into flour, turn the flour into bread, pile it all in, and stir, and put it in a 100 degree oven...but, why are you asking me this?

A: Ryan D: If it's a pineapple upside down cake, I'd use pineapple mix and upside down things, of course.

A: Stephen Jordan: (Furrows his brow) I DON'T COOK!

A: Arianna Riemma: A Mothering Cake has rainbow colors with mom's picture on it.

A: Carly Rubin: I'd take it to scratch!

A: Wally Dawydiak: And add the three cherries.

Q: DESSERT SOUNDS GOOD, BUT WHAT ABOUT BREAKFAST IN BED?

A: Meghan Renna: I'd make eggs over easy, 'cause they're easy.

A: Robert L. III: She only gets breakfast in bed when she's sick.

A: Liam Huysman: I'd fill her bed with pillows and give her cereal.

A: Stephen Jordan: Remember, I DON'T COOK!

A: Cassie Loben: Well, I'd make Sunnyside up eggs... that's NOT Sunnyside down.

A: Lucas Mercep: No way. I even lost the privilege of making a batch of toast, since I made the fire alarm go off.

Q: WHAT WOULD YOU MAKE MOM FOR DINNER?

A: Frankie Leotta: The PURPLE bag chicken; it's a special kind with directions.

A: Hector Lemus: I'd make her favorite, ummm, I think it's tortilla with eggs. It's like, umm... it's like clay, like a ball, and you smash it into a circle and cook it, 70 degrees, and when it's ready you cook eggs, but not hard boiled eggs, and then wait for 6 minutes.

A: Ryan D: If it's a pineapple upside down cake, I'd use pineapple mix and upside down things, of course.

number of atoms in the abovementioned strand of hair by peanuts filling sports stadiums around the world, with Smith standing chest deep in Goobers.

There's the famous quantum tunneling effect — you've heard of that, of course. In the microworld, particles actually seem to pass right through walls. Smith throws a ball against a wall; it comes back. Everything perfectly sensible there, but when you have nanoparticles they pass through nanowalls.

"When you make things small, things get strange," says Smith.

Smith and Schuller pass through walls, too, but that might be a little bit in the future.

Smith wears a magnetic suit with all sorts of metal objects stuck to it. Materials on the nanoscale can be more easily subject to magnetic manipulation. Which leads to the field of storage data. Schuller has created nanodots, on which a great deal of data can be stored. So there's Smith holding a pincushion and proclaiming that on the heads of the protruding pins could be stored the works of all the world's great authors, with room to spare.

Ivan Schuller and Adam Smith

When the film ended (closing with bloopers and outtakes), Schuller stood on stage and asked for questions. To his surprise, at first there were none. As a few questions did come, it was apparent that the scientific audience was a little taken aback (and uneasy with) this "entertainment." Many seemed neither entertained nor amused.

One woman did not like the "elephant analogy." She thought a mouse would have been more appropriate. But then there would not have been the natural link between the large elephant and the peanuts filling up sports stadiums.

In fact, for everyone who asked a question, Schuller tossed him or her a bag of peanuts, a showman's reward that seemed to make a few of the scientific crowd uncomfortable.

Schuller's defense was, "You can't be enthusiastic and scientific at the same time." He added, "You can't just appeal to the intellect. If you tell people you have an educational film about science they'll turn right off."

Schuller, a professor at the University of

A: Stephen J: I told you, I DON'T COOK!

A: Arianna R: When she was a kid, her favorite meal was meat loaf, so I'd bring that back . . . I can't describe what it looks like; maybe people don't like it because it doesn't look appetizing if it's too mushy with gravy on it.

Q: SOUNDS LIKE A PERFECT DAY. WHAT COULD POSSIBLY GO WRONG?

A: Frank L: A BAD Mother's Day would be if she woke up and the house was flooded.

Q: LIKE IF THERE WAS A LEAK IN THE ROOF, HOW WOULD YOU FIX IT?

A: Robert L. III: Maybe, I'd ask my mom for a CORK or something.

A: Ella Collins: I'd get a ladder, and put a really heavy piece of, umm, what's it called? Oh yeah, lumber, and put it on the leak and staple it in . . . I'd have to fix it? Just me?

Q: UH-OH. WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF THE TOILET OVERFLOWED?

A: Anna Collins: I'd get the wrench and screw a nail into the pipe so it would stop.

A: Frankie L: I'd get pots and pans and use the sink water.

A: Cassie L: Well, I'd get rubber gloves!

A: Liam H: I'd go up 'n down with a plunger; it's a stick with a bowl at the end.

A: Alison Cappabianca: I'd tie a blanket around my neck and go into the bathroom and PLUNGE, like SUPER TOILET PLUNGER!

A: Ella C: I would close the bathroom door.

A: Ryan D: I'd get on my mini motorcycle and go to the beach. Is that good?

A: Stephen J: I'd use a hammer and a bucket (hee hee) and then, I'd whack it!

Q: WHAT CAN YOUR MOM DO, THAT YOUR DAD DEFINITELY CAN'T DO?

A: Frankie L: Put makeup on.

A: Ryan D: Ummm, cartwheels! And, oh yeah, he can't get into her yoga positions.

A: Stephen J: COOOK!!

A: Cassie L: Well, my mom can cook and my dad . . . just can't.

A: Meghan R: Wake up! Mom calls his name, and I wiggle him.

A: Frankie L: I would say, my mom can sit out by the pool and tan and my dad can't.

A: Ricky Pellechia: My dad can't cook, but he can catch fish and ride a horse.

Q: WHAT'S ONE OF THE TOUGHEST JOBS MOM HAS TO DO?

A: Stephen J: COOKING!!!

A: Arianna R: To shop for presents for me because I stopped liking the same stuff I liked last year when I was seven, and I liked snakes.

A: Robert L. III: She helps me feed my fish.

Q: WHAT GIFT WILL YOU GIVE YOUR MOM FOR MOTHER'S DAY?

A: Carly R: I'd go shopping with her and we'd get our nails done. She likes shoes. She has a really big closet and goes crazy finding shoes in it, so I'd get her more shoes.

A: Stephen J: Once I gave her a box with sun-roasted frogs.

A: Calvin Levine: A magical cleaning angel.

A: Hector L: I think perfume that smells like flowers.

Q: HOW NICE. WHAT KIND OF FLOWER?

A: Hector L: Like dandelions.....and I would teach her some English words. It would be important words, like "wonderful" and "exciting." (Richard Muralles nods at this.)

Q: CAN YOU DESCRIBE YOUR MOM TO ME?

A: Jackie Pendleton: She's my BEST friend.

A: Cristina Monaco: She buys cool stuff, like bug-eyed sunglasses.

A: Hector L: My mom's name is Rosalia. She is Spanish. She is pretty nice.....She has black hair. But then, it turned brown, but then, it turned back to black.

A: Alison C: She's pretty. She has good eyes, mouth, hair and ears. Mom is brave; if there's a spider, she gets rid of it for me. Also, she's organic and waters houseplants.

A: Arianna R: She's tall and works in a hospital, and has brownish short hair, but not too short. She has a good personality, not like one of those people that roll their eyes.

A: Grant Shea: My mom rocks out loud!

A: Hunter Skorobohaty: She wears a t-shirt that says "Working Without a Contract."

A: Max P: She loves animals, and I got the same genes.

A: Cassie L: Well, my mom is sweet and kind and caring and gives the best hugs.

A: Robert L. III: My mom is someone who takes care of me and likes me for who I am.

A: Carly R: She's a girrrl.....she has blonde hair and she's Five-Foot-Two.

Q: UH-HUH.....FIVE-FOOT-TWO AND EYES OF.....?

A: Carly R: "Eyes of "me."

Who's Here

Stephanie Talmage
Marine Biologist

By Debbie Tuma

As a 23-year-old marine biology student, Stephanie Talmage, of East Hampton, has already appeared on the "Rosie O'Donnell Show" for discovering a special antibacterial compound in sand sediment, has researched coral diseases in Mexico, studied sand dollars in the Gulf of Maine, and battled Dengue fever while studying algae in Tahiti, where she is now working on her Masters degree.

Sitting in a local coffee shop while home on a recent break, it was easy to imagine that Talmage has spent most of her life in (or under) water. Dressed casually in a tank top, shorts and sandals and sporting an underwater watch, she quipped, "Some people like Gucci and Prada, but I'm happier buying all my clothes at a surf shop."

Talmage said she always loved nature and the outdoors, growing up in a thirteen-generation family of potato farmers in East Hampton. Her father, Stephen Talmage, graduated from East Hampton High School, and her mother, Carol Ann Rutkowski, a teacher, comes from the farms of Sagaponack. They live in a farmhouse and grow sunflowers and other cutting flowers.

"My uncle, who lives next door, grows strawberries and pumpkins," she said. "Growing up here, I always loved to grow plants as well."

Talmage began to get interested in science during her years at East Hampton High School, when she became a semi-finalist in an Intel Science Talent Search for discovering a new antibiotic found in a local sumac plant. She also discovered, along with two fellow students, an antibiotic isolated from Hawaiian sand sediment, which got her on numerous national and local TV shows.

Talmage first got the "beach craze" when she started lifeguarding at the age of 16, at the bay beach at Maidstone Park in Springs. From ages 17-22, she was an ocean lifeguard at both Indian Wells and Atlantic Avenue beaches in Amagansett.

"All my hobbies are water sports," explained Talmage. "I wake board, surf, kayak, and water ski, and I have my own 20-foot Boston Whaler. I first got my Coast Guard boater's license, and then, while studying in Tahiti, I got my "French captain's license," which means I can operate up to a 200-ton vessel in French waters." In Tahiti, which is a French-owned island, she works as a teaching assistant for students from Northeastern University, taking them out on the water and touring them around.

This is part of her three-year Masters program, which she is working on at California State University in Northridge. Though Talmage is based in California, she is doing her marine biology studies on the island of Moorea, in Tahiti, where she decided to specialize in phytology, the study of algae, because "it is the underlying component to all marine ecosystems, and it is the beginning of the food chain, which fish eat."

One of her ultimate goals is to try and find a cure for the brown tide, which wiped out the shellfish beds of Eastern Long Island

In her study of algae, she started swimming around the Tahitian reefs, looking for questions to investigate. She now studies a species of algae known as sargassum, or mangarevense, which is the species name. She started looking at the chemical component of the seaweed that covered the ocean floor, and tried to figure out why this seaweed thrived in the particular areas where it was more prevalent.

"I looked at the chemical components to see how it defended itself against herbivores (plant-eating fishes) and urchins," she explained. "I found out it is because it contains 'phlorotannins,' a group of chemicals found throughout different types of plants, which taste bad to fish and urchins," she said. One of her ultimate goals is to try and find a cure for the brown tide, which wiped out the shellfish beds of Eastern Long Island during the 1980s.

Before coming to Tahiti, she had done two different projects in Akumal, Mexico, as part of her undergraduate work at Cornell University, where she earned a degree in Science of Earth Systems, with a concentration in Ocean Studies. She went out in boats and dove in the coral reefs, trying to find a cure for yellow band disease in the Caribbean reef building coral.

"We found a cure that actually worked," said Talmage, who is also certified as a PADI divemaster. "While in Mexico, I also worked on trying to find a cure for a fungal disease in sea fans, which are soft, coral-like fans. There is quite a die-off of these sea fans throughout the world, and we wanted to see what was killing them."

Talmage and two colleagues figured out a way to boost the immunity of the sea fans to make them resistant to this disease. These findings are now in review at an important science journal called Marine Biology.

Through her research in Mexico, Talmage met Dr. Robert Carpenter, an algae expert in the biology department at California State University at Northridge, outside of Los Angeles. She decided to do her Master's work there, which ultimately took her to study in the waters of Tahiti. For the past two years, she has been living and working on the island of Moorea, which is isolated, beautiful, pristine, and loaded with interesting sea life in its waters.

When she met Dr. Carpenter, he had gotten a grant to start a long-term ecological research project (LTER) funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF) for long-term monitoring of the coral reef ecosystems off the Island of Moorea. When she signed up to be part of this research, Talmage had to fly from Los Angeles, eight hours to Tahiti, and then hop a plane for a 10-minute ride over to Moorea Island. Living at the marine station, her work has been a combination of research and being a teaching assistant to 17 Northeastern University undergraduate students, who are studying about coral, fish and algae.

But even in paradise, there can be problems. Last February, when it was the middle of their summer and it was 110 degrees, she and her colleagues had to sleep in little beach bungalows with no air conditioning, trying as best they could to protect themselves using bug nets.

"The most terrible part was the mosquitoes, since there was no getting away from them, and we all eventually caught Dengue fever, which is a mosquito virus," she said. "I was very sick for three weeks with this disease, which they call 'break bone fever,' and I had a fever of 104-105 for five days." Talmage said her whole group of 26 people caught this disease, "but luckily, it happened in shifts, so we all took care of each other." She finally recovered, but she will never forget this ordeal.

Talmage said since she had to work over last Christmas vacation, her parents flew to visit her, on a direct, 13-hour flight from New York to Tahiti. When asked how her parents feel about her ocean research, Talmage, whose father is also an alumnus of Cornell University, said, "They think it's great, especially since my goal is to come back to the East End and try to work in the field of marine biology, teaching and doing my research. I would love to try and find the cause of the brown tide, which had such a devastating effect here."

Talmage will return to Moorea after this vacation, and continue her marine research there until June. She will then go back to Santa Monica, where she will continue her work until December, when she plans to get her Masters Degree.

"I plan to be back home in East Hampton for Christmas," she said. "Then I hope to find a job here to continue my biology work, since I really care about the marine environment. I figure I might as well give back to this East End environment, which my family has been contributing to for generations."

California at San Diego, put together When Things Get Small for $20,000, a nano-amount on a Hollywood scale, with Rich Wargo, of Not Very Serious Labs. Wargo has worked with "Frontline," "48 Hours" and the CBS Evening News, but in the promotional notes for the film, he says, "……working with the big networks, all that was interesting, but it was merely preparation for doing something important like Not Too Serious Labs."

Schuller, who seemed disappointed at the response to his film, replied to the question of "What do you think of String Theory?" with "I'm more concerned with this [nanoscience]; this is real." And tossed out the obligatory bag of peanuts.

Schuller would placate — one hoped — the more technical needs of his colleagues when he gave a talk on his work the following day, but it was apparent he saw his entertainment an effort just as important to science.

In an international competition, When Things Get Small has won two Bronze Tellys for local, regional and cable productions. Mona Rowe, the lab's Media and Communications manager, remarked that as the audience was filing out she overheard one scientist say, of Schuller, "I'm glad he's doing it, I'm not going to."

Productions like Schuller's fill a need to communicate to the general public basic aspects of burgeoning scientific fields. If you want to learn more about carbon nanotubes, nanobelts, nanomageticism and catalysis on a nano scale, check the lab's website, at www.bnl.gov. As for Schuller's film, go to www.ucsd.tv/getssmall.

At any rate, when I think of the nanoworld, I know I'll often remember those innumerable peanuts filling up all the sports stadiums on earth. The simplest things can leave the deepest impressions.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

The Strike

It was Monday and I was totally excited because I was going to strike. Screw it, that is what I say. I'm taking a stand. I woke up Monday around noon and went to Main Beach to enjoy a day without any stress or work.

I wasn't really sure why I was striking. All I knew is that I wasn't going to have to go to work like so many of my friends out here. I called my friend Erika, who is from Colombia, but is getting her masters here, to see what she was doing. "I'm striking today," she said.

"Cool, me too," I said. "This striking thing is great. We should do this at least once a month. I am at the beach right now. Do you want to go get some coffee somewhere?"

"Sounds good to me."

I got in my car immediately with intentions of heading to East Hampton to stop for coffee. But then my cell phone rang with some bad news.

"David!"

"Yeah, hey Dad, what are you doing today?"

"I'm at work! You should be at work too. Where the heck are you? It's almost one o'clock."

"Yeah I know, I'm striking."

"You're striking?"

"Yeah, I thought that everybody was striking today. I think it is a good idea. Too many of us are stressed out, including you I might add."

"Today is the Latin strike, you idiot. You aren't supposed to be striking!"

"Yeah I know that."

"Then why aren't you at work?"

"I really like the idea."

"What idea?"

"I like the idea of striking for a day. It's like a national holiday, but more rebellious. I feel like I am cutting school."

There was a brief pause on the other end of the line. I think that my Dad was starting to figure out that I had a pretty valid point. After all, he was the one that was at the office and I was the one that was at Main Beach, on my way to get coffee with a pretty girl. Who is the smarter one now?

"You may be onto something, David."

"I'm telling you, Dad, this needs to catch on. I think that too many people are working way too hard. You just got to strike every once in a while. It is a much better excuse than calling in sick, I think, because when you call in sick everyone knows that you are lying and they get jealous. But when you say that you are on a strike, they respect that you are taking the day off."

"But the fact of the matter is that you aren't Latin."

"Dude, I go to Latin night with my friends Erika and Esteban all the time. I'm Latin enough. Just tell everyone that mom is Latin or something."

"Nobody here is going to believe that you are Latin, everybody saw you dance at the Christmas party last year. Trust me, you are not Latin, you are the furthest thing from being Latin."

"Look, the way I see it, I can strike and spend this insanely gorgeous day at the beach, or I can go to the office and sit inside all day and not strike. I'm not an idiot."

"Are you going to come in or not?"

"I told you, I'm striking."

"All right, fine, whatever. I'll say that you are sick. Get here extra early tomorrow. Otherwise, you'll be in big trouble."

"Well, if I'm going to come back, some demands of mine better be met."

"Like what?"

"I don't know, I'll think about it when I come back tomorrow."

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #397

I have to begin this week by saying a fond farewell to Alice Fiske, widow of the last direct descendant of the founder of Shelter Island, who went to her reward last week. She was our Grand Duchess. I never met anyone who didn't have a kind word to say about her. And nearly everyone on Shelter Island has been touched directly, or indirectly by her generosity. Rest in peace, Mrs. Fiske.

Driving Instructions for Shelter Island

Tourist season is upon us now and I thought it would be beneficial to review the driving regulations on Shelter Island.

1. Never use turn signals. It gives away your next move.

2. If you're a tourist, don't bother maintaining a safe distance between yourself and the car in front of you, because the space might be filled in by somebody else, putting you in an even more dangerous situation. We know you need to get where you're going before anybody else does.

3. If you're a tourist and want to think like an Islander, start by allowing one deer length for every ten miles per hour of speed. It doesn't matter if there's a car in front of you or not, just imagine that there is. The deer, however, will not be imaginary.

4. Learn to swerve abruptly without fishtailing. Shelter Island is the home of high-speed deer slalom-driving.

5. Never come to a complete stop at a stop sign. No one expects it and it will result in your being rear-ended.

6. Give Right of Way to any car that needs extensive or expensive bodywork.

7. Allow truck occupants that stop traffic in both directions so they can have a conversation, 5 minutes before you lay on your horn.

8. Braking is to be done as hard and late as possible to ensure getting a vigorous ab workout and foot massage as the brake pedal violently pulsates.

9. Never pass on the left when you can pass on the right. It's a good way to prepare other drivers for off island driving.

10. The top speed limit on Shelter Island is 40 mph. This limit applies even if no one is looking, even if it's the middle of the night, even if you have a BMW, Porsche, Mercedes or any exotic car, even if you have a phony license, even if you drive a truck and think you own the place.

11. Just because it's obvious that you have no room to speed up or move over doesn't mean that a tourist flashing his high beams behind you doesn't think he can go faster in your spot.

12. Always brake and rubberneck when you see an accident or even someone changing a tire on Shelter Island. Not much goes on here and we need all the news we can get.

13. The faster you drive through a stop sign, the less chance you have of getting hit.

14. Don't bother wearing your seat belt on Island. This way you can avoid injury in the event of a collision by exiting your vehicle immediately, straight through the windshield. Wearing your seat belt will only impede your hi-velocity escape from danger.

15. Remember that the goal of every tourist driver is to get where you're going before you do.

16. You are not allowed to tie your annoying teenager to your front bumper. You must tie them to the top of the vehicle and be sure the head is securely tied down so it doesn't flap as you drive.

17. There's so much conflicting information about the safest place to put the toddlers in car seats, we suggest securing them in the car seat first, then placing them in the back and securing the car seats with your jumper cables.

19. Racing to the ferry doesn't get you off the Island any quicker. You still have to wait for the boat.

20. Do not balance your checkbook while in line at the bank's drive thru window. If you do this, it is legal on Shelter Island for the driver behind you to push your car gently into traffic.

21. If you cut ahead in a ferry line, be prepared to have your car pushed off the dock. The amount of money you have, what you own, who you own, your level of affluence means nothing here; cut that line and you're dead.

JULIA ROBERTS DEBUTS ON BROADWAY

The opening night of the revival of Richard Greenberg's drama "Three Days of Rain" with the film star Julia Roberts making her Broadway debut at the Bernard Jacobs Theatre was a maddening scene reminicent of Elizabeth Taylor's debut in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes" over twenty years ago. Massive crowds overflowed the streets where policemen on horseback maintained order. The celebrity studded after party was at Cipriani on 23 Street.

Rocco Oliverio, 56

Rocco Anthony Oliverio was born in Bronx, New York, on November 13th, 1949. He attended St. John's University and upon graduation began work in management at Helena Rubenstein. After five years, he moved to the East End and opened a small restaurant in Hampton Bays.

In 1982, Oliverio switched from the restaurant to the real estate business. It was in this year that The Real Estate Store began. Now, almost a quarter of a century later, The Real Estate Store has expanded to four offices in Quogue, Westhampton, Hampton Bays, and Water Mill.

His success in the business world is only a small part of what made Mr. Oliverio such a fine man. Rocco's work with local charities was boundless. His baby, as it has been described, was the Special Olympics of Long Island, where he acted as the organizer for the Rock-N-Roll Show at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Now in its 7th year, this is not only a wonderful fundraiser, but stands as a testament to the care, dedication and generosity of Rocco Oliverio.

Mr. Oliverio acted as a contributor and coordinator for the Long Island Cancer Center at Stony Brook as well and did work with East End Hospice. In November of this past year, Rocco was honored for his commitment and contribution to the National Alliance for Autism Research.

On Monday, May 1st a memorial mass was held at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Quiogue. He is survived by his wife, Julie, and sons, Anthony and Andrew.

In honor of Rocco Oliverio's endless spirit of giving, it has been requested that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the Special Olympics of Long Island c/o The Real Estate Store, Inc., Box 911, Quogue, NY, 11959 or by purchasing tickets to this year's Rock-N-Roll Show and celebrating Rocco's life and legacy.

For several weeks before May 1, the Town and Village were engaged in contract negotiations so that the town would provide virtually all municipal services for Sagaponack, including police, highway maintenance, a building inspector, the ZBA and the Planning Board. However, there were a number of sticking points, largely of a technical legal nature concerning such concepts as indemnity. As of last Friday — the last business day before Sagaponack's State-mandated deadline to adopt a budget would arrive — final agreement had not yet been reached.

Absent a government services agreement by May 1 between the town and village, the village would be on its own (other than for police services). But here's the rub. Sagaponack residents have already paid their 2006 property taxes to the Town of Southampton. Yet, on June 1, absent agreement to the contrary, the town would no longer be providing services to the village. In that case, the town eventually would rebate the second-half taxes to the village (less the amount attributable to police), but those funds would not arrive nearly in time for Sagaponack to provide its own government operations beginning on June 1.

So, the Sagaponack Trustees prepared two budgets, a bare-bones budget that would apply if agreement could be reached, and a full operations budget. The full operations budget would impose a one-time property tax levy of $340,000, or 16 cents per $1,000 assessed value, on village residents. That money would be used to fund operations until the Town rebate arrived, at which point the taxpayers could be paid back.

Things were looking grim, partly because various representatives of the town were quoted as remarking that the May 1 deadline was not the town's deadline – a rather cavalier attitude that ignores the history of the Sagaponack incorporation effort. But fortunately, the final sticking points were resolved at the final hour. With signed contract in hand, the Sagaponack Board of Trustees passed their bare-bones budget on Monday, May 1.

So, on June 1, when Sagaponack would otherwise have had to make it on its own, things will continue pretty much as they always have, with the Town of Southampton managing things. The residents of Sagaponack will have their bare-bones village after all.

The "Run Out East" Classic Car Show In Cutchogue Had People In Awe

An oh so sweet Ferrari

A lawn filled with classic cars gleamed in the bright sunshine last Saturday, as the 4th annual "Run Out East" Classic Car Show took place at the Galluccio Family Wineries, on the Main Road in Cutchogue.

Sam Germana, a lawyer from Port Washington who organized this event, said about 70 cars participated, from Long Island, New York City, Connecticut and New Jersey. He said about 120 people came as spectators, to enjoy a special luncheon at the winery, to listen to music, and to see all these fabulous sports, vintage and exotic cars, from 60s Corvettes to 2006 Ferrari 430s.

"The first year, we made this a charity, donating money to Trinitas Hospital, but this year, we just did it for fun," Germana explained.

Germana said most of the exotic cars represented today were Ferraris, Lamborghinis, Porsches, Alfa Romeos, and various other mixes. "Ferrari Chat," the biggest online forum for Ferrari owners, were there, and Ferrari of Long Island participated in the publicity for the show.

"We call this a car show for people who never liked car shows," he joked, "because it's just a fun day for people to walk around and be social, and there's no pressure or snobbery. People can walk right up to the cars and sometimes even sit in them, if the owners allow it. It's a very friendly, informal sort of event."

One couple, Roberta and Bill Zoller of Bayport, had brought their 1978 Silver Anniversary Corvette, which Bill gave his wife for Christmas.

"I found this car through mutual friends, and I just wanted to surprise my wife with a great gift," said Bill Zoller.

Roberta Zoller said, "I really love this car, and so far I only drove it once, but I can't see over the steering wheel."

Another car owner, David Noto of Manhattan, had brought his 355 blue Spider to enter in this show, which judged the cars on their special merits and awarded prizes to the owners. "This is the fourth year I came to this show, and I come with my friend, who is a Ferrari owner. I have three classic cars, and I love them. It's great getting together with other car enthusiasts, and sharing the same interests. It just gets better each year."

Roger Matles, of Ryebrook, New York, was sitting in the front seat of his yellow pearl 2002 Acura Rio. He said he was with a group of guys who travel together to car shows, and they also take their clas-

North Fork Artist Of The Week

Painter, Sandra Moelius

By R.B. Stuart

When Sandra Moelius was just five years old, she recalled making potholders. "I went around to the neighbors and sold them. So I've always done creative things," she said. "Around eight years old I used to make crocheted patterns for my dolls, then in sixth grade I wrote my first 60 page novel about painters from England. During high school and college I wrote poetry, drew and illustrated, so I've always used my hands to create something. But it wasn't until I was in my 30s did I realize it was art," she remembered. "I thought I'd grow up to be a writer or a teacher. I lacked the confidence to actually see myself as an artist."

Moelius was born 57 years ago in Long Island as an only child. "My father is very creative, he's a landscape designer and a great story teller with the potential to be an author. In the 1920s my great Aunt made beading for dresses, so I believe it was through her that I found my love for fabrics," she mused.

Moelius wanted to be a teacher so she attended Covenant College in Tennessee for education, but later she felt she couldn't control a class of 30 children. So she quit school and began working for a craft store where she started teaching crafts, then went on to study floriculture at SUNY Farmingdale where she met her husband. "I graduated and then decided to take writing classes at Suffolk Community College. Only to return to school in the 1990s to study human relations in Patchogue at St. Josephs where I added a minor in development. That's when I finally felt more confidence in my artistic ability and gradually changed from illustrating to painting," she explained.

Moelius moved to Mattituck in the early 1970s, where she dabbled in all areas of the visual arts. "With painting, it's the colors that I love because there's such an infinite variety and combinations. But my challenges lie in finishing a painting and not getting stuck in the middle or getting lost in the details," she conceded.

In 1997 she illustrated "Edgewood Edgewater," a 40-page, black and white soft covered book of her drawings and poetry. Her poetry spans nature, self, art, death and love. Her 'doodlings' as she calls them, reflects a symbolic kaleidoscope of sorts, with shapes and figures that meld into something recognizable, and yet foreign at the same time. The thick black lines though dense and fluid, is the dichotomy she feels as an artist, as she struggles with the doubts of her creative capabilities.

She derives inspiration from the world around her and nature, especially music and reading. "Sometimes when I'm reading a novel it can just take three words for me to think, 'that would make a really good painting or poem.' My own photography at times influences me creatively, when I see the developed version, it can make me want to write or paint," Moelius said. The foundation of her creativity is her spiritual life.

"If there was one thing I could do over, I would have sought out people along the way that would have encouraged me as an artist as well as being more involved in the artistic community," she admitted.

In ten years time she hopes to be a full-time artist. "Where as the only thing I do is write, paint, take photographs and travel," she concluded.

Moelius has a Riverhead storefront studio that she would like to convert into an artist's co-op, a place where she and other local artists can display their work for sale. To see her selection of art and crafts or for more information about the co-op, please contact Sandra Moelius at 631-298-5887.

sic cars to charity events and good causes. "Tomorrow, we're going to The Rusk Institute in New York, for kids with disabilities, and we're going to let the kids crawl through our cars. Then in July we're going to Camp Good Days in Watkins Glen (New York) where we'll take the kids around the laps track. We like to give back. I had a double bypass from a heart attack several years ago."

Throughout the afternoon, crowds of people picnicked on the lush grounds of the Galluccio Family Wineries, sipping their different wines, and listening to mellow music provided by local groups including Patrice Mullins. Families, couples, and friends all hung out, strolled the grounds, and ate in the sun. Galluccio Family Wineries is the first and only North Fork Winery to use 1,350-gallon handcrafted wooden tanks imported from Bordeaux to ferment their red grapes. This winery also has started its own wine club, offering benefits exclusive to its members.

Two other car buffs, Phil Jacobs of West Hempstead, and his friend Fred Frey of Hampton Bays, also brought their favorite cars to this event. "I always come to this show to see who wins awards, and this year I'm really glad the weather held up," said Jacobs, who brought his 1978 red Spyder.

Frey, who arrived in his green 1972 GTV Alfa Romeo, said, "The hot cars and good wine, along with the free music all go really well together."

Marilyn and Bob Smith, of Medford, were admiring a custom-built red Ford GT with rear engine drive. "We had just come out here for the day, and were driving by, when we saw this cool show, so we decided to wander in," said Bob Smith.

"We both love cars, and we also love good wines. You can't beat the combination, at this beautiful vineyard."

OVER THE BARREL...

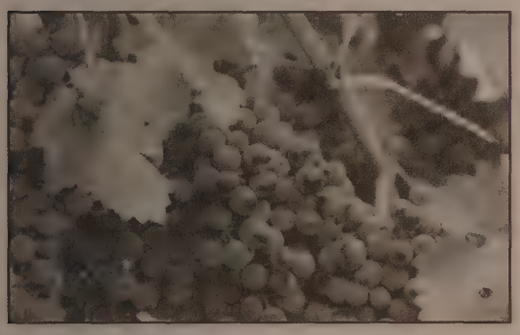
Tiny Crystals.....In The Wine?

Some time ago, a reader of my website (www.lenndevours.com) sent me an email:

"Lenn, I just had a bottle of Castello de Borghese's Novello. (It was) delicious and paired well with a leg of lamb I had. Anyhow, in the last glass, I noticed there were crystals of I what am hoping was sugar on the bottom. Is this common with this wine? It has to be sugar crystals, because when I washed them with water, they retained their color. I got scared for a moment that ground glass found its way into my bottle."

If you've been drinking wine for very long, you've probably seen these crystals. I see them at least once a week. But don't worry, my wine-loving friends. These crystals are not ground glass. Nor are they sugar. Keep washing them with water and you'll notice that they don't dissolve. Sugar would.



So what are they then? Potassium-bitartrate crystals and they aren't a flaw in the least. They don't affect the wine's flavor or color and they won't hurt you either (though they are gritty and I don't recommend drinking them just for that alone) I won't pretend to be the Alton Brown of wine, so I won't get too deep into the science at play here, but here's a brief run-down:

As grapevines grow, they pull minerals up from the soil, including potassium. And, the riper the grapes get, the higher their levels of tartaric acid. So, when certain wine is cooled, either sitting in a cold warehouse or just before serving (CdB's Novello is a light, low-to-no tannin wine so it can handle a slight chill) the potassium and the tartaric acid get together to form these potassium-bitartratecrystals.

I've seen them quite often on the wet end of a cork but you'll also see them on the bottom of the bottle.

Emily Weissman from WineMonger.com, calls them Weinstein or "wine stones" in Austria. She told me in an e-mail "Many (people) even consider them to be a sign of a high-quality wine, which might be why I have also heard them referred to as "wine diamonds." And, when she asked one of the winemakers whose wine they import, Hans Gsellmann, about weinstein he told them '(These crystals are) a natural process a wine will go through on its path to the peak in its development. When you see these flakes at the bottom of the bottle or on the cork, you can be almost certain that you are opening the wine at the right time. You should consider yourself lucky.

So, not only are they not harmful, they may be a good thing.

They can happen in both red and white wines. If you see them in a bottle of white wine, do not decant the wine. I never decant whites because I think a lot of white wines lose aroma and character with air contact. Ever notice that white wine glasses are narrower and lead to less surface area? Just pour carefully as you get to the last glass or so.

For reds, you can either pour carefully or decant. Nine out of ten times I'd probably just pour carefully, especially with a gulping wine like Novello.

The Amazing History Of Southold

Our Writer Digs Deep Into A Town's Past

By R.B. Stuart

In 1640, Southold was settled by English and Dutch settlers probably from Connecticut, says Geoffrey Fleming, director of the Southold Historical Society. Fleming, a Long Island native, forfeited Southampton and took the job four years ago. "It was a position I thought would be interesting and a place with tremendous possibilities," he said.

There were 13 original families who settled in Southold, and by 1698 it had grown to 138. All interrelated; as was typical in the early years before we knew better, cousins marrying cousins. Now, the hamlet, as of the 2000 census, has 5,400 full time residents. The entire Southold township has 25,000.

In the 1630s the men worked in the lumber trade and sugar trade, and within a decade the introduction of farming had taken hold with crops of corn, flax, hay, vegetables and animals. Through the 1850s they raised cattle and in the late 19th century the Polish and Irish immigrants introduced potato farming. Because there haven't been any studies, the median income is unknown.

"There was no income tax, so your income was whatever you made. If you were lucky enough to even keep a ledger, then every conceivable space on it was utilized with other logs, because paper was expensive for them," Fleming informed.

With dirt roads connecting the towns, it wasn't unusual to get around on a horse and farm wagon, and if you didn't have a horse you'd rent one from someone who did. Fleming said, "Only the very elite would have a horse and carriage." He suspects this mode of transportation lasted through WWI.

With the introduction of the automobile in the late 19th century and early 20th century, one local family man, John Howell, bought his first Oldsmobile in 1905. In 1913 the Howell's bought a Buick and they retired the car, keeping it for Sunday drives. The Howell's 1905 Oldsmobile was later donated to the Suffolk County Historical Society where it sits today.

The most famous person to be born in Southold was Ezra L'Hommedieu in 1734 of French descent. "He was a very important man in the area. He was a friend of George Washington's. They consider him to be the one that put Southold on the map. He was involved with so many important aspects, especially the revolutionary congress. He died in 1811 at 77, and Ezra was regarded as "the greatest man that ever lived from birth to death in Southold," Fleming explained.

Anne Currie–Bell was another important person in Southold's history. Born and raised there, she founded the Southold Historical Society. "She was well educated and was enormously respected in the community as a historian. She felt something had to be done to preserve the history of the area, so it's because of her we exist here today. She died in 1964," Fleming stated.

In the 1840s – 1850s the railroad came to town and created competition for the shipping industry. Eventually, the railroad would dismantle the hold the shipping industry had on the area by buying out the ferry companies. It was a smart move for the railroad companies but it didn't dissuade those from traveling by ferry the 16.5 miles across the water from New England to the East End of LI. In the 18th century Dr. Alexander Hamilton from Maryland was eager for such a journey, by writing a travel journal of his much awaited ferry ride from the North Fork to Connecticut to Boston. That beautiful trek by ferry still holds magic and convenience to tourists and commuters to this day. It's hard to imagine a time without it, as local historians say that regular ferry service between LI and New England began sometime in the 1930s.

"Early on, the large summer homes and estates were built along Main St. to show off to passersby. By the 1950s, people didn't care anymore about seeing the large houses, and as the roads got wider, taxes were higher and rentals were not good. People began wanting amenities like indoor water, plumbing and electricity, and over the past 100 years all the summer homes and estates are gone," Fleming concluded.

One old English style Southold house circa 1649 was preserved and relocated to Cutchogue where it rests as part of the historical landmarks of the time. (You can see it behind the Cutchogue Library off the Main Rd.)

JIronically, people are seeking the large homes and estates to show off once again, not necessarily on Main St., but across LI. So some things may have changed since the 1640s.....and other things, well, have stayed just about the same.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

MIRIAM SCHAPIRO AT FLOMENHAFT GALLERY

Miriam Schapiro's current show at the Flomenhaft Gallery in New York is about a lot more than its title, "Dancers, Dolls, Etc.," indicates. In fact, we'd say it's the et cetera which is the most telling.

While Ms. Schapiro's pattern paintings are world-renowned, her dancers and dolls, potent as iconic, even archetypal images derived from such subjects as popular culture and Asian religions, exist on a much deeper, personal plane.

But how could one possibly come up with such a conclusion if one does not know Ms. Schapiro intimately or, for that matter, is not familiar with her life at all? For this critic, the answer lies in her East Hampton studio. It wasn't only the paintings that were important here, but also the arrangement of materials that she uses for her collages: ribbons, cloth, snippets of this and that.

If memory serves yours truly, each item had its own drawer in a large, horizontal file cabinet, each object occupying its own separate but equal space. Each drawer's contents seemed fragmentary, but, when employed in Ms. Schapiro's pieces, became part of the entire work.

Work by Miriam Schapiro

That file cabinet came to represent a metaphor, not only signifying the creative process in Ms. Schapiro's art, but also symbolizing her fragmentary life as she struggled with the demands imposed by a career and a family. The cabinet was also the means by which Ms. Schapiro could rid herself of clutter.

Ms. Schapiro's current exhibition reinforces this fragmentation, the self-containment of objects that are categorized and put in place (stored in a drawer). Yet despite the clutter of multiple imagery, the entire work emerges as a single vision. The thematic implications become apparent: diversity leads to wholeness.

Ms. Schapiro uses diverse configurations to illustrate her fragmentation and containment: For example, there's her fan-shaped piece, where doll figures are installed in spoke-like fashion recalling a bicycle wheel: all images lead to a center circle.

Another work features distinct blocks, each one containing an appliquéd image. Looking like a grid, the configuration also evokes fragmentation and segregation. (The shape resembles Ms. Schapiro's filing cabinet as well.) The piece's title, "Autobiography," says it all.

While there are distinct horizontal and vertical forms representing containment and separateness, the circle is featured prominently in many of Ms. Schapiro's works (for example, "Two Among Many").

This shape suggests diverse themes, many contradictory to the idea of fragmentation.

Could it be that Ms. Schapiro is celebrating the circle of life and/or the spirit of family? Has she finally reconciled the disparate elements of her being?

"Dancers, Dolls, Etc., 1976-2006" will be on view at New York's Flomenhaft Gallery (547 West 27th Street) until May 20.

Honoring the Artist: Denise Regan

For most artists, aesthetic inspiration starts with a subject. For painter Denise Regan, however, there are more important elements than the subject itself. Whether she's doing a still life or seascape, pattern is the key. Being her characteristically articulate self, Ms. Regan expresses it this way: "Layers of patterns are the key, intricate patterns with simple designs."

This juxtaposition of intricacy with simplicity is also a key to Ms. Regan's work, as well as a clue to her way of thinking. For example, she's simultaneously worldly-wise, having traveled to such vital places as Vienna, Paris, Australia and Mexico, yet she's content to live in Shelter Island among peaceful and uncomplicated environs.

Regarding her work, the same dynamics appear to exist. On one hand, her compositional elements are complex and multidimensional; her subjects are often fulfilled with action and energy (like her circus series).

Conversely, her style lacks perspective, incorrectly evoking the suggestion that it is "primitive." Her subjects particularly involving family life and local landscape connote a similar lack of complexity. (In fact, Ms. Regan's penchant for detail belies that notion.)

Ms. Regan has also had diverse, seemingly contradictory artistic experiences, starting with her academic training at both undergraduate and graduate school. For example, not only did she study with Chuck Close at New York University, but also learned about Constructivism and Conceptual art. Her printmaking training accounted for her joining Arnold Hoffmann at his Springs Screen Print Workshop in the late 1970s where she worked with Willem de Kooning.

It's safe to say that Ms. Regan has had many inspirations, including, of course, Mr. Close and Mr. Hoffmann. Even so, other experiences have influenced Ms. Regan in her endeavors, like her trip to Vienna where she came upon the Chinese National Circus, complete with their red tent. It was this trip that motivated her subsequent circus paintings.

Family members have also impacted on Ms. Regan, namely her mother, an interior designer, and a great uncle who was a glass designer. Certainly her father, a physician, played a part in her artistic development as well. Ms. Regan remembers when she would accompany him to the hospital and spend time drawing while she was waiting for him.

The most potent influence currently, however, is Ms. Regan's home in Shelter Island's Mashomack Preserve which she shares with her husband, John. The house, which John constructed from an old cottage, is the perfect refuge for Ms. Regan. From her studio overlooking the water, she can gain inspiration from the blue birds on the beach or the ospreys, sea hawks and herons that also call the place home.

Perfect subjects for patterns and colors and intimacy and simplicity, all rolled into one.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

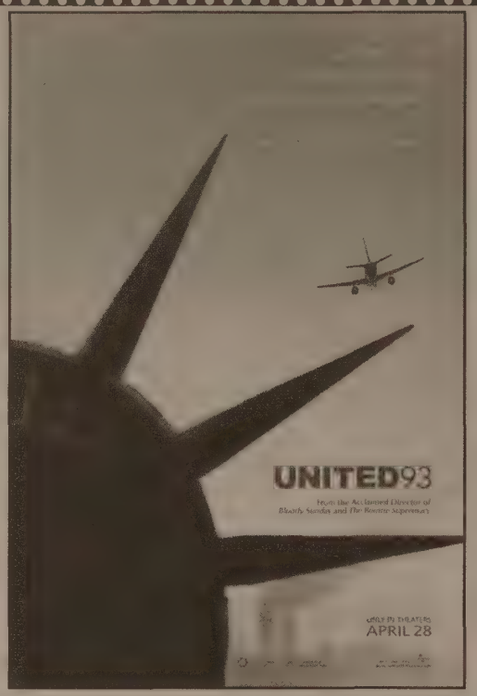
MAYOR ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

United 93 (+)



Although everyone in the theater knew the terrible outcome of the Newark United 93 flight en route to Los Angeles, I would be surprised if they weren't as riveted to the screen as I was during this extraordinary film. If they reacted as I did, they were silently weeping throughout the movie.

The four Arab hijackers on board United 93 were aware of the fact that the Twin Towers in New York City had been successfully destroyed earlier that morning by fellow terrorists. To convey what happened during this disastrous voyage, when the hijackers sought to crash this plane into the Capitol, writer and director Paul Greengrass relied on the telephone calls that passengers made to their families and to 911. Those conversations reported the murders of the two pilots, the stabbings of several passengers, and the maniacal behavior of one of the hijackers wearing a bomb who threatened to blow himself up if the passengers attempted to interfere with the hijacking of the plane.

Greengrass was also able to draw on the conditions in the National Air Traffic Control Centers at the time, witnessed by many who were able to reconstruct what happened before the plane crashed to the ground, killing everyone onboard. Some of those individuals portrayed themselves in the movie.

One of the facts I learned during the film which infuriated me was that only two fighter planes were available on the East Coast to intercept the commercial plane on its way to destroy the Capitol. The two pilots reported that they had no guns onboard, and they offered to hit the United plane with their planes and bail out. They requested permission to carry out that action but were never given an order allowing them to use force to bring down the commercial plane. The authorities feared they would force down the wrong plane since the skies had not yet been totally cleared.

As I said, some of the roles were portrayed by people actually involved in the events that day, e.g., Ben Sliney, who was in command of the Federal Aviation Administration on September 11th. The performances of all the professional actors and non-actors are phenomenal, especially that of David Alan Basche, who portrays Todd Beamer. Beamer delivered the line "Let's roll" before he and others sought to rush the Arabs and take control of the situation. That line in the film is delivered in a low voice so as not to theatricalize the horrific events taking place. The telephone calls to loved ones, saying "I love you" and "Goodbye," were impactful beyond belief.

I saw the movie last Sunday afternoon at 5:30 p.m. and was surprised that the theater was only fifty percent full. This movie is not to be missed.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

American Dreamz

The trouble with parody today is that in this watered-down world of adoration of the "Popular," we are bobbing around in a sea of parody – feeble, ridiculous imitation, and it's liable to drown us with insipidness. Singular, original efforts of persevered integrity are deluged with weak, walking, talking, singing, speech giving shams of the real thing – the ultimate of which are those of self-parody, as satirized in the comedy American Dreamz sending up two monuments to self-parody: President Bush and television's "American Idol." The embarrassment of riches enjoyed by these two national smirks is nearly out-smirked by the movie itself. It is so patently obvious in poking fun as it points its finger, laughin' and snickerin', it might be the biggest of the embarrassments.

The too-easy targets nearly get the better of American Dreamz writer-director Paul Weitz, who tries so hard to skewer the subjects he punctures the audiences own distastes and arouses their sympathies. The President comes off as a poor schlep trying his best and Idol's contestants, as honest-to-gosh folks with a tad too much ambition. And one is a terrorist! Mr. Weitz, whose film adapted from Nick Hornby's novel, About a Boy, done with brother Chris, was so well done, we're thinking, where's Chris? Paul's skewering in Dreamz is more like a shish kabob that went up in flames, burning him and fizzling to ash. Not well done, overdone.

"American Dreamz" is the title of the TV talent show patterned after "American Idol" and Hugh Grant portrays a caricature of "Idol's" real-life host and judge Simon Cowell, the man behind the throne; a smarmy, smiling cad, filled with self-loathing. Equally, the man behind the Presidential swivel chair is Willem Dafoe as a Cheneyesque chief of staff. Dennis Quaid is the dolt in the swivel chair that is fast spiraling downward in popularity. To give some spin upward, the chief of staff books the diminishing Pres on the very, very top rated "American Dreamz." This is and has been a meaty subject, but as blatantly and vapidly cooked-up by Mr. Weitz you'll have to sift through the ashes to find intelligence.

Hogging the spotlight is the talent contestant from hell, Mandy Moore. With unbridled opportunism, abetted by Jennifer Coolidge as her one-dream Mom, she will seek and destroy anyone trying to share the stage. She gets close to Hugh Grant's fakey Mr. Big. He knows she is as terrible a person as he is. "It's like looking in a mirror," he tells her. "It's revolting and – attractive." Just as in Barry Levinson's Wag The Dog, this movie covers: media image manipulating, pop culture bashing, presidential finagling and the mating of Lady Entertainment and Gorilla Politics. However, the revolting and the attractive delete each other out in this awfully naïve mish mosh. Of course, I'm prejudiced. How can you squeeze any more foolishness out of talent contest shows? They are simply another roach-eating, survival reality show enacted by similar amateurs.

I regret having to pan Paul's movie. It was only yesterday when he and brother Chris and dad, the fashion designer and Hollywood actress mom (Susan Kohner) played on our back roads here in the fabulous Hamp-toons. Were we the shining examples of glossy glitz and celebrity that drives all those variety act practitioners to strive for the "Top". Does it make a difference whether the judges on "Idol" or "Dreamz" are pulling the strings or Cheney, Rumsfeld and Rove have their itchy fingers on the controls of the White House? No. Not any longer. It isn't fair to compare the President to Talent Contestants. The Talent folks have to study and practice what they do to win the Top spot.

Instead of a storyline, the movie rolls along like a succession of vaudeville acts. A song, a reading of dialogue and some jokes. Oh, the jokes. The American dream must be one of them. After all, it has the power to turn a bomb-wielding terrorist into a different sort of fame seeker, even having to face the blond bombshell, Mandy Moore's "can do" performer – the movie's only real villain. Her evil chicanery makes the politicos seem like innocent rubes. Or, is it the fellow who made the movie who's responsible? It's difficult to tell. Reality has never been faker. Will the real President please stand up?

The self-proclaimed Populist President has as much in common with the common man as the man in the moon. So much out of touch with reality, he has resorted to reading! Even, newspapers. We elitists don't stand a chance.

review: the history boys...by gordin & christiano

The Brits are delivering a history lesson of sorts, as well as a theatrical lesson in excellence, by way of Alan Bennett's award-winning new play, The History Boys, which was a smash hit at London's National Theatre. The play, a stimulating comedy/drama that has been performed in four countries, arrived on Broadway direct from Sydney, Australia with the original cast still together almost two years after the play first premiered in Britain.

The play focuses on two teachers with boldly contrasting ideas about education, and the eight brash high school candidates they are preparing for scholarship exams that will give the boys a chance to enter one of England's two most revered universities, Oxford and Cambridge. The plot puts the two teachers into a rivalry for the minds and hearts of the students, challenging the boys to think for themselves in uniquely differing ways.

Richard Griffiths, Frances de la Tour, Stephen Campbell Moore

Irwin, played by Stephen Campbell Moore, is a young, savvy, but cynical English teacher who has been brought in by the school's headmaster to help coach the boys. He encourages them to sprinkle their essays with interesting quotes and provocative ideas that will win them favor for originality. His mature and grossly overweight adversary is the boy's beloved history teacher Hector, played by Richard Griffiths. He has been stimulating the boys to have a love of culture and to be moved to learn for the love of knowledge, while groping them by turn on after-school motorcycle rides. He strongly opposes the school's results-oriented philosophy embodied by the headmaster, played by Clive Merrison.

The precocious boys are able to quote poetry, recite Shakespeare, re-create the dialogue from classic films like Now Voyager, and to improvise a whorehouse interaction in French using only the subjunctive. When Irwin arrives on the scene, they are forced to make some difficult decisions about love and knowledge that will affect the rest of their lives.

The story unfolds in a series of scenes that flash back, then forward, then back again before coming full circle. They are connected to one another by projected film clips of the characters going through the imagined activities that might actually have happened between the respective scenes. The clever effect allows for quick set changes and gives the story an added momentum and life that makes each of the scenes all the more compelling.

Bennett refuses to take sides as he takes us on an unsentimental journey that, if anything, embraces the randomness of life. His boys and their teachers are layered well-developed characters that strike amusing cords of humanness. Only the headmaster comes off a bit stereotypical.

The superlative production has been staged with expert care by Nicholas Hytner, the director of the National and a frequent collaborator with Mr. Bennett. Although they are dealing with some serious subject matter, they deliver the evening wrapped in an entertaining style that juxtaposes musical numbers, intellectual debates, and emotionally moving movements, with outrageous juvenile pranks that come together in a dazzling style that is captivating. The events accumulate so that each scene and every moment contribute to the thrilling whole.

The two men have been aided by an outstanding ensemble of unique actors that give an additional layer to the playwright's characterizations. The relative newcomers that play the boys are Rudi Dharmalingam, Samuel Barnett, Dominic Cooper, James Corden, Sacha Dhawan, Andrew Knott, Jamie Parker, and Russell Tovey. They are accomplished actors, who give uniformly excellent performances, appearing not only real, but completely spontaneous. Cooper, who plays the sexy charmer Dakin, and Barnett, who plays the misfit Posner, tormented by a crush on him, are stand outs as well as Russell Tovey, who plays the athletic Rudge, the least intelligent of the bunch.

Richard Griffiths turns in an unforgettable portrayal as the history teacher that will surely make him a contender for this year's Tony Award for best actor in a drama. As his nemesis, Stephen Campbell Moore is affecting as well. The cast also features the grand British actress Frances de la Tour in a droll performance as the female school mistress, Mrs. Lintott, that is an absolute delight.

Although the themes and subject matter may not be for everyone, The History Boys is possessed with a seductive style that is decidedly rare in our commercial environment that stresses star power over quality and talent.

The History Boys opened on Broadway at the Broadhurst Theatre, 235 West 44th Street on April 23, 2006. For tickets call 212-239-6200 or online at www.telcharge.com or by calling 212-239-6200 or at the box office.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

BASQUIAT

It is a Dan's Papers' Saturday, so this May 6th at 1 p.m. the FREE Film Festival of "They Made the Movie Here" features another of our close-by artist and film products. (The dear potato farmers will have to get their own festival.) The film is BASQUIAT and we're presenting it at the Ross School auditorium on Goodfriend Drive down the hill on the left, off Route 114 in East Hampton.

So strong and memorable are the colorfast reputations of Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning, their East Hampton studios are as familiar to us as our own kitchens. Their images are so bright, other East End artists seem only to appear as silhouettes, dimmed by the glaring fame of the two spotlighted painters. Over-shadowed, too, are the other areas of the Hamptons...such as Montauk, where artists like photographer Richard Avedon, playwright Edward Albee and painter/ film maker Julian Schnabel work at their art. Certainly, Schnabel's studio must be known. Close to the water, the walls stand over 16 feet high and there is no ceiling... no roof. No doubt this is to insure that he will not be hindered in any way... not the size of his paintings or his ego – and, now, what work he does there. For now, he is seriously making movies.

His first feature film, Basquiat, appropriately, is about a painter's career. Jean Michel Basquiat was a young graffiti artist who found flaring fame as a studio- painter and, just as quickly burned out when he died of a heroin overdose... he was 27 years of age. This was in 1988, a period Mr. Schnabel knows well. It was the peak of his painting career. The 80s were a time of fast big money that went as fast as the stock market ground it out. Like chopped meat, a lot of it went bad quickly, but a lot of people got fat. Known as the era of greed, buying became a sport and art galleries thrived. Andy Warhol was a king of sorts and with his nod Basqiat became a sort of Little Prince.

Mr. Schnabel wrote and directed Basquiat, from a story developed by Michael Thomas Holman. In it, Albert Milo, portrayed by the marvelous Brit actor Gary Oldman, represents the Julian Schnabel character. Schnabel himself does not appear in the film, but most of his family does as do his studio and home. Milo's paintings, of course, are Schnabel's work and so are Basquiat's. (Basquiat's father would not give permission for the use of any of his son's work so, Schnabel painted all the work seen in the film.)

As some of you might remember, Mr. Schnabel kind of began his filmmaking career doing slide shows at Guild Hall. I'm kidding a bit, but he's done a few there and as you also know, his recent movie, Before Night Falls, won an Academy Award Nomination for its star, Javier Bardem. Not surprisingly, the two films are similar, beginning with the protagonists as boys. Jean Michel is first seen taken by his mother to view Picasso's "Guernica." He is pristine in dress and appearance and when his face lights up with wonder upon viewing the huge painting, he wears the glistening crown of the Little Prince. When next seen he is wearing dreadlocks and living in a cardboard box and avidly needing to draw and paint. With help, he is a star in the art world, but dreaming still of surfing in the South Pacific... another world... another time ...away from the grime of a time sullied by corruptive greed.

Jeffrey Wright gives a remarkable portrayal of Basquiat and what a supporting cast: Oldman as Milo and David Bowie as Warhol. Then, there is Benicio Del Toro, Dennis Hopper, Parker Posey, Courtney Love, Claire Forlani, Christopher Walken, Willem Dafoe and so many more.

So, be a guest of Dan's Papers and drench yourself in art and some fine refreshments after the show, including the extra-fine Hosting by Sarah Halsey standing in for me, Guy de Fraumeni.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals.

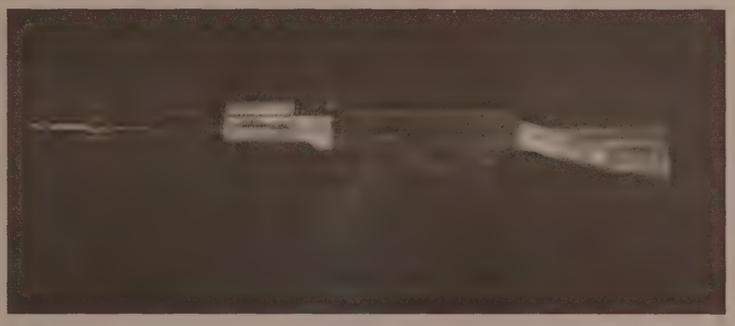
When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

How to (Legally) Fire a Gun



Guns, and the issues concerning them, are never an easy subject. This country is sharply divided when it comes to assault weapons, gun control, concealment, licensing, and the Second Amendment. The right to bear arms is touchy at best. In blue state America, and especially New York, we have our fair share of gun owners, but the general attitude and actual laws aren't as permissive as, say, Florida or Montana where gun shows, hunting, firing ranges, and the NRA rule the land. Let's not even get into militias with a hankering for full-auto. I'm becoming more of a liberal by the day due to current world circumstance, but despite my peaceful disposition, I am a gun owner. I own an assault rifle – an AK-74 to be exact – and that's okay. When people ask, the best way I can explain my ownership of such an intimidating weapon is to compare it with a vintage automobile. My gun is a variation on the Kalashnikov AK-47, the most widely used weapon in the world. The AK-47 is the gun you see in the hands of every Third World army. It was the weapon of choice for the Russians and the Vietnamese. It's still used by the Taliban and most of the Arab world, and can be found in the hands of many of the deadliest men in war-torn Africa. It is a perfect and simple machine that needs little upkeep, it's the most recognizable machine gun in the world, and it's been around since 1947. My gun is the reworked and improved version created in 1974. It looks almost identical, but is much easier to fire. Gun collectors and enthusiasts without evil and ulterior motives look at their weapons this way: It's a hobby, a piece of history, and a brilliant work of engineering. The problem, of course, is for an unfortunately large portion of the (mostly illegally) armed community, a gun is a tool of death, menace, and destruction. For this reason New York City has some of the strictest gun laws in the country.

Just under a year ago, on May 24th, 2005, the New York State Assembly passed a bill to require ballistic fingerprinting of all firearms. Buying a rifle in this state isn't like buying a pistol, where obtaining a permit is a long and arduous process. I walked in, picked the gun, showed my driver's license, paid, and walked out. In the city it's not so easy. Even a shotgun, which can be bought like a loaf of Wonder Bread at most any Wal-Mart in America, requires a special license for city residents. Along with the bureaucratic mess, you'll have to shell out a $55 application fee and $99 for fingerprinting. The age for a gun permit recently changed from 18 to 21, and it takes 30 days from the initial application. Non-residents (like most of us off-season readers) can buy and transport firearms through the city, but only have a 24-hour grace period to get them out. You don't need a permit to buy them, but must swear in a written statement that you wouldn't be refused if you were a NYC resident, are qualified to purchase outside city limits, and must provide documentation of being a non-resident. Drivers traveling through from Long Island to hunt upstate need to keep their guns in the trunk in a locked case.

If you're not a criminal and want to discharge a gun in Manhattan, your best bet is to visit the West Side Pistol and Rifle Range. They offer a wide variety of gun-related services including help with permits and licensing. The range has several levels of membership and they are authorized dealers with a knowledgeable and safety-oriented staff. For novices, the range has a single visit program where new shooters can fire a .22 caliber rifle. These guns are a step up from pellet guns, and are legal to fire without a permit (not in public, dummy). You must be 18, and the first visit costs $50. It comes with an instructor, safety course, targets, use of a semi-automatic rifle, and 50 rounds of ammo. Return visits are $25. After 3 months of inactivity a refresher course is required. The West Side Range is located at 20 West 20th Street (off Sixth Ave.) (212) 243-9448.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

The Other White Pine Forest

Last Saturday, I took a hike with the East Hampton Trails Preservation Society (EHTPS), led by Gene Makl, to the "other white pine forest." It is so called because Wilson's Grove is considered to be the White Pine Forest; the largest stand of white pines on Long Island.

The entrance to this trailhead is at the corner of Hands Creek Road and Van Scoy West. The hike we took is 4.8 miles long; it took our group (of about sixteen hikers) one hour and forty-five minutes to hike. A nice gentleman named Perry volunteered to be the "sweep" (the last person in line), making sure we didn't lose anyone along the way. We crossed Hands Creek Road, following the rectangular blazes of the Paumanok Path (PP) onto the Jump Trail. Equestrians have been using this trail for many years, and piles of branches are set across the trail for horses to jump. It appears that most riders now prefer to ride their horses around the barricades.

After a short distance, we turned left, off of the PP and onto Foster's Path heading south. Officially, Foster's Path is supposed to be marked with orange rectangles; most of the blazes, however, are red. We were on this trail for a very short distance then turned right onto a powder blue-blazed trail into "the other pine forest." Wilson's Grove is located a short distance southwest of this trail. It's amazing that this trail is a narrow preserved corridor between houses, because the evergreen forest blocks most of the houses from sight and it feels like you are in the middle of the woods. The trail tread has a deep spongy duff of pine needles that is heavenly to walk on. There are some huge pitch and white pines. After approximately one half mile, we saw Joshua's Hole, a lovely vernal pond, off to our right.

When we reached Northwest Road, we walked a very short distance north along the shoulder of the road and then saw a trail entrance to our right, across the road. You will recognize the entrance by the upright poles and Nature Conservancy sign. We followed the trail a short distance until we reached the PP. If we had turned left when we reached the PP, it would have taken us to Wilson's Grove. We turned right onto the PP. This is part of the Northwest Path, so we saw its yellow triangle blazes along with the white PP blazes. All of the blazing is new here and very easy to follow. It was a relief to see the restored Northwest Path yellow triangles. Recently, someone had covered several miles of yellow triangle blazes on the Northwest Path. The EHTPS Trail Maintenance Crew has now restored all of that blazing. Samp Mortor Hollow, a deep kettle with huge, gnarled trees growing out of a small marshy pond, appeared on our right (east) side. A short time later, a large glacial erratic, sitting on the edge of another kettle hole appeared on our left.

Soon we reached Five Corners. Whalebone Landing crosses over the PP creating four corners; Ralph's Landing Road heads east to Grassy Hollow. creating the fifth corner. We took the extreme right turn and traveled on Whalebone Landing Road. We were traveling south on a very well worn-in woods road with no trail markers.

Once again, we reached Northwest Road. We then turned right and walked along the road shoulder. Just before we reached Timber Lane, we made a left turn into the woods. At first, we walked parallel to Timber Lane, then diverged away from the road, to the north. We traveled on what had once been the PP, but has now been converted to a blue-blazed trail. We followed this trail for one half mile and turned right onto the PP. Then we were on Foster's Path again, this time north of where we had been earlier. We were heading south, back to the Jump Trail where Foster's Path and PP split. We continued on the Jump Trail (the portion of the PP we had traveled earlier), and followed this trail back to where our cars were parked.

Traveling east on Montauk Highway in East Hampton, pass Wainscott; turn left onto Stephen Hands Path (look for the Cedar Point Park sign). Stay on Steven Hands Path to the end (2.2 miles). Cross over C.R. 114; follow the sign pointing to the right, to stay on Stephen Hand's Path. At the end of the road, turn right onto Cedar Street. After 1.1 miles, turn left onto Hands Creek Road; follow this road for 2.1 miles to the corner of Van Scoy West. Park on the right shoulder (east side) of the road.

This is a pleasant, well-blazed hike with a lot of lovely scenery. Enjoy!

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Quick, pass the Pepto-Bismol, I'm getting gas pains because every time I pick up a newspaper or watch the news, it's all about the high price of gas. What annoys me most is the vast amount of misinformation I keep hearing not only from Fox News, but from CNN and all the other news organizations with acronyms for names. My head is spinning from the dizzy and lame excuses we're getting from the administration and our caring friends at the oil companies. Here's the truth, as I see it.

It's very simple, it's called supply and demand, with a premium blend of greed and stupidity. We as Americans are probably the hardest working and smartest people on the planet, however, over the years we've grown fat with success. America has become the land of the 8,000 square foot single family home, the 16-ounce sirloin and the 5,000-pound SUV. America has always built the largest and heaviest cars in the world, because with the exception of the old producing nations, fuel in this country has always been the least expensive in the world. Well, it's still the cheapest in the western world, except in comparison to just a year ago. The main reason it seems expensive is that most Americans drive cars that get god-awful gas mileage. You wanted big, you got it, baby. As I mentioned a few articles back, the biggest complaint from Hummer drivers is that their SUVs get bad gas mileage, which reminds me of the home buyer who buys a home near an airport and then complains about the noise.

I personally blame Detroit for part of the mess. Auto manufacturers could have made lighter and more fuel efficient cars, but they didn't, and instead left that market to foreign companies. Those unknown little foreign companies with funny names did quite well over the years, thanks to Detroit's inaction. Toyota and Honda sales will soon surpass General Motors. Didn't any American auto executives see what was happening and figure out that there is the same profit margin selling five small cars as there is in one big SUV?

Get one thing straight, the oil companies are like any other company in the world. They are in business to make money, and are not your benevolent gas station pals on virtually every other street corner in America. For reasons too convoluted to go into here, I once sat in on a corporate meeting with the biggest oil company in New York that sold home heating oil. The executives were miffed that it was a warm winter and that heating oil sales were down. It's a little unusual that every time there is a glitch anywhere in the world relating to oil, prices rise the next day. Also, Americans are basically using the same amount of fuel they have been using for years. Why all of a sudden are oil company profits amazingly high? If the crude oil production is costing them much more and that factor, in turn, raises the price at the pumps, why are their profits so far out of proportion? Americans are not stupid. Why is Congress?

VW Jetta Diesel

We don't need alternative fuel, but alternative cars. Forget hydrogen. It will take fifty years to develop a system to safely deliver the stuff to the customer, as well as produce the vapor economically. Look to Europe to see what to do. They've been paying five to six dollars per gallon for years. How do they cope? Europeans buy fifty to seventy percent of their cars with diesel engines. Not only do diesel cars get substantially better fuel mileage than gas automobiles but they are more robust and longer lasting. In Europe, diesel fuel is less expensive than gas.

In last week's Autoweek, the editors comparison-tested a Toyota Prius hybrid and a Volkswagen Jetta diesel. The Volkswagen actually had better overall gas mileage than the Prius. Virtually every large truck on the highway is a diesel. Every navy ship is a diesel. There is even a new airplane on the market that has twin diesel engines. Audi just won the coveted Sebring race with a diesel racecar, which will also be entered in the most prestigious race in the world, the twenty-four hours at LeMans. They are expected to win. Perhaps this is the year of the diesel.

SUVs can be produced that get thirty to thirty-five miles per gallon. Believe it or not, virtually every manufacturer makes them but not for the American market. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler all have foreign offerings in Europe that get great mileage because they either have smaller gas engines or diesel power. Most Range Rovers sold in England are powered by a diesel.

Soon a newer, cleaner-burning diesel fuel will be federally mandated for sale at the pumps. It is up to our friends at the oil companies to promote it.

Remember, diesel technology has been with us for about a hundred years. It is certainly a well-proven commodity, and a lot simpler than the Rube Goldberg technology of hybrid gas-electric cars. Gas prices will remain high, but think about it. If your car had twice the mileage, that three dollar gallon of fuel you buy now would get you as far as a dollar fifties' worth did previously. Something to think about.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

I think we have gotten a jump-start on the spring season this year. The trees are blooming earlier and the sales are popping up all over. This week, I left my wallet at home, it was empty! Let's do some spring shopping!

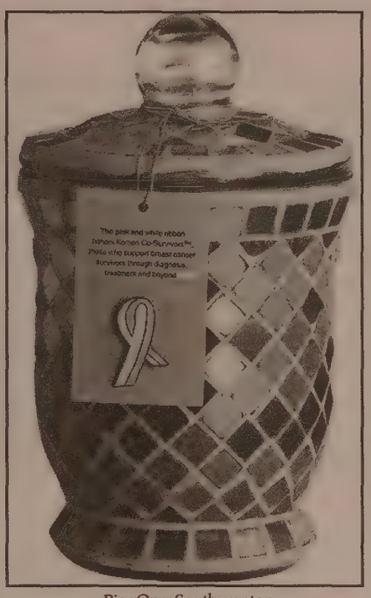
What's Your Point, Needlepoint and Needful Things located at 120 Windmill Lane in Southampton is celebrating their "Second Anniversary Sale" from May 6 through May 21.....Every single canvas is on sale with up to 50% off. They are stocked and ready to go with brand new exciting canvases, designers and fibers. You can also take 10% off the fiber for your sale canvas when they are purchased together. Let me tell you, they will fly out the door, so get there early. Once they are sold, they are gonesville!

Nearby on Cameron Street in Southampton, Charos is having an "Inventory Clearance Sale" on selected merchandise. Also on sale are universal remotes, table radios, mini systems and furniture.

The Omnihealth & Racquet Club on County Road 39 is offering three months for $289 just in time for Mother's Day and upcoming Father's Day gift ideas. A twelve-month rate is also available saving you $100 off the regular price. Give a call at 631-283-4770 for more information.

You know everytime I pass Pier One Imports on Montauk Highway in Southampton, I can't resist stopping in and checking out their marvelous sales.....This new sale is very interesting if you love foreign accent pieces and decorative accessories from around the globe and at 20% to 50% off. With Mother's Day around the corner there are so may gift items to choose from throughout the store. With moms in mind, I especially loved the silver mini frames, vases, florals and wind chimes.

At Walpole Woodworkers, their new location on Montauk Highway in Water Mill, you can save $100 off on any purchase of $1,000 or more. This is a great source of the classic Adirondack chairs in natural or stained colors and you can save $80 on the purchase of two. There is quite a selection of small buildings, arbors, gates, fencing, backyard play systems, mailboxes, lanterns, rockers, outdoor furniture in cedar and teakwood, cast aluminum, Brazilian cherry, and more with savings dividends. Surprise mom with an arbor on her day.



Pier One, Southampton

At White's Pharmacy on Main Street in East Hampton, Clinique Gift Sets are ready to go for Mother's Day. The fragrance "Happy," one of my favorites, "Clinique Happy Heart and Aromatics" is under $50.

Now is the time to start prom dress shopping. At Medusa on Park Place in East Hampton, there is a great prom dress sale in progress saving you 20% off for the month of May.

Also on Park Place in East Hampton at the Top Drawer Lingerie some good ideas for Mother's Day are available. Gift items, sleepwear, robes are some of the selections that would make mom happy on her special day. Also, for your information, there is also a large selection of bras in larger sizes and pants in stock in sizes from petite to 3X. Quantity discounts are given if you need to stock up.

A little off the beaten path, just in time for Mother's Day, I found a unique shop, By The Bunch at 225 Montauk Highway – Monarch Center in Moriches. This is a unique store that sells fresh flowers as well as a large selection of fashion jewelry, unique gift ideas, antiques, art, photography and so much more. The prices are very affordable here, so who really needs a sale, which they do have occasionally. Check it out!

How about this? Beyond The Beaten Path in Eastport is a unique antique shop whose owner, Emily Weiss, has a passion for vintage clothing. Among the vintage clothing you will find furniture, lighting, decorative items and accessories. A good source for oldies but goodies. Stop by and say hello!

On The North Fork: Harrow's on Old Country Road in Riverhead is celebrating their grand opening with four bonus deals on outdoor entertainment. This is a good source for swimming pools, spas, hot tubs, saunas, outdoor furniture, pool tables, and game room goodies.

I would like to take the time out to wish all our beautiful moms a very happy and healthy Mother's Day. And a special thought to my mom, who is looking down from heaven on my family and me.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Mother's Day Shopping!

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, and you would like everyone to know about it, I would love to hear from you via email at shoptil@danspapers.com or you can reach me by fax at: 631-537-6755.

Dan's Fashion

Your Ever-Expanding Wardrobe

There was a time when "barefoot and pregnant" was a phrase that took the glamour out of a woman's persona. Once she had a bun in the oven, her role as a woman was absorbed by her role as a mother, and her personal style went out the window. Shapeless frocks dubbed "moo moos" were as good a uniform as any. She was pregnant, enjoying the freedom to be barefoot and suffering the shocks of a new human growing in her system. But the times have changed. When I walk down the street, there is no one so commandingly attractive as the basketball-bellied mommies-to-be. Any woman who walks down the street with sparkling eyes and a child inside her glows.

There are plenty of things about our current era that I don't like. But one way in which we have grown as a society is the acknowledgement of the sparkling independence of a pregnant woman. She's always been beautiful, the smiling face and the fullness inside her. But independent? There was a time when pregnancy marked the end of a woman's professional life and the beginning of her life as a "homemaker." A pregnant woman appeared to be more dependent than a teenage kid. After all, if she couldn't work and she was off the market, where did she belong? Barefoot and pregnant watching Donohue in a muu muu?

Today, pregnant women can keep working until a few days before they give birth, and most companies ensure that the mommy-to-be has her job secure when she returns, sometimes just a few weeks later. Personally, I don't envision myself rushing back to the grind when I have a beaming little infant at home. But the fact that it's an option has made pregnant women all the more visible in today's world. They are working, commuting, and exercising with emerging options like prenatal yoga.

And along with all that living, pregnant women have managed to slip out of their muu muus and into some of the most fashionable clothing around. New lines of maternity clothing have emerged from this movement, and the old standbys have upped their game. So if you are looking to celebrate Mother's Day with a mommy-to-be, get her something that brings out the inherent glow that comes with pregnancy. Get her something that affirms her beauty as a pregnant woman.

Mimi Maternity has been around since I was in the womb. But their selection has grown from elastic-waisted stretch pants to include a career collection, a swimwear collection, a yoga collection, and much more. They use extra-soft fabric and stretchy material to make sure that the future mom can grow into the articles of clothing. They have belly styles, for the women who are lucky enough to grow a little bubble in the tummy, without compromising much of the rest of their bodies. They even have denim, with special stretchy qualities and roomy waistlines. Mimi Maternity can be found at many shopping centers, and also online at www.mimimaternity.com.

Major companies that didn't specialize in maternity before have also seen the space in the market. So clothing giants like Gap have devoted entire stores to maternity-wear. Fashionably embroidered tank tops and 3/4-length crewneck sweaters give women options for whatever look they're going for, from professional to sexy. Blazers and Capri pants are comfortable while keeping the look appropriate for work. In the months leading up to the birth of your child, there is no need to sacrifice professionalism. I work with two pregnant women, and if anything, they have only commanded more respect now that they are expecting. To supplement your professional or active wardrobe, check out gap.com and click on "maternity" to browse their wares.

So if you know someone with a baby on the way, help her honor the excitement of all the Mother's Days to come. And also remind her that she doesn't have to sacrifice her femininity when she's pregnant or once she's a mother. In fact, the pregnant woman is a celebration of the female form, and the clothes she wears can reflect that.

Soothe Your Inside, Outside, and Mom, All At Once

Massage in the Hamptons is ubiquitous. All we are missing are the massage chairs on the sidewalks, like those on Canal Street in Manhattan that beckon busy people to stop for a five-minute neck rub on the way to work. No longer special treats, massages are now an integral part of our frenzied lifestyle, and our conversations are peppered with terms such as shiatsu, reflexology, and acupressure. But anyone who has ever sunk into a massage bed expecting to shed the week's worries under knowing hands only to realize, moments later, that it is not going to do the trick, understands that it is truly special to experience an hour long massage that draws the body and mind into one organically harmonious entity.

A Swedish massage at Naturopathica Holistic Health in East Hampton is one such experience. Eshana, the massage therapist who expertly wilted my knots, softened my skin and changed my temperament, also subtly inspired me to drink three glasses of water in the morning before doing anything else, abandon my coffee habit and commit to massage as part of my overall attempt to feel loose and relaxed more of the time. In the environment created by the philosophy behind the company, the highly-trained and educated massage therapists at Naturopathica seem determined to leave our bodies better off than they found them, and to turn us on to the healing and nurturing powers of pure and natural ingredients.

Founded in 1995 by Barbara Close, a massage therapist and herbalist who has studied healing methods across the globe, Naturopathica means to heal with natural remedies. The products, instantly recognizable in simple and elegant blue bottles and packages, are sold in over 200 spas around the country, and Close, an authority in alternative treatments and healing therapies, lectures, consults and writes about her passion for a holistic lifestyle.

Understanding that the western mindset is unfamiliar with the more eastern approach to well being, Close is dedicated to education. Nauturopathica's fascinating website (www.naturopathica.com) illuminates Close's overall ideology and also offers what I found to be an absolute gem: a glossary of ingredients detailing the benefits and uses of each item found in the botanical skincare and body care line. You can learn the properties of yarrow (anti-inflammatory and cell regenerating), the purpose of carrot seed extract (useful in reducing wrinkles) and the benefit of cypress oil (a decongestant for veins and the lymphatic system) plus the advantages of replacing what Naturopathica calls Immortal (toxic) Ingredients, such as petrochemicals and paraben preservatives that can be found in less pure and non-holistic skincare products, with naturally-derived materials that serve the same purposes as chemical thickeners, emulsifiers and surfactants.

The ethos of purity and a reliance on the natural world to bring us what we need extends throughout the company. The flowers, herbs and plant materials used by Naturopathica in their products and treatments are gathered from organic farms and fields in the United States and around the world and every supplier is personally selected by Barbara. These items, which, in combination, can do everything from assuaging insomnia and easing chronic back pain to calming the skin and revealing radiance, are synthesized with essential oils to create a usable medium, and then converted into the final compound and mixed, bottled and packaged in Amagansett.

I spoke with Mark Dauenhauer, the spa manager, and he highlighted the quality of the ingredients by explaining that the exact same combinations in alternate forms are actually edible. For example, the pumpkin enzyme scrub is comprised of pumpkin wine, pumpkin pulp, vitamins and a soybean-derived preservative. At Naturopathica, the scrub is used to achieve a glowing complexion, but if you mix it up at home and add a spoonful of sugar, it would be a delicious snack, high in beta-carotene! Very cool.

Mark has big plans for the future of Naturopathica, including additional seminars, classes and exercise instruction. Currently, the spa menu offers a sixty-minute or a thirty-minute classic facial that you can personalize by adding one of several exotic, more specific treatments – the aforementioned enzyme peel, a power (glycolic) peel, a moisture drench or a green tea wasabi treatment (!). In addition, there is a treatment

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Within a week or so the wild salmon season officially begins and this is great news for salmon lovers everywhere. While salmon is available all year long it is mainly from sources of farm-raised fish – and some choose not to venture into the world of farm-raised salmon at all.

I personally feel that salmon, rich in heart healthy omega-3 oils, is not to be dismissed. There is strong scientific evidence that eating an oily fish such as salmon should be an important part of one's diet. Your fish market may offer King salmon, an organic farm-raised salmon imported from British Columbia which, according to Danny Cornesi of Cor-J Seafood Market in Hampton Bays, is being fed natural organic feed. Check your local fish markets as this is a fine choice when either wild salmon is not available or the price too steep. Here are two truly simple salmon recipes whatever your salmon choices may be.

A fine accompaniment to your salmon menu may include local asparagus just peeking out of the ground, tossed in extra virgin olive oil and kosher or sea salt and roasted in a 450 degree oven for 8 - 10 minutes, according to size. With a nod to Cinco de Mayo, I've also included a single-ingredient dulce de leche sauce to serve over ice cream or fruit to complement your spring menu.

BROILED SALMON WITH THYME AND LEMON

This truly simple preparation has to become a household favorite. Minimal seasoning yields maximum flavor. Just broil and serve!

Serves 4

4 center-cut salmon fillets, about 6 ounces each, skin removed
2 shallots, finely chopped
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

1.Place fillets on a heatproof stainless serving platter spaced about one-half inch apart. Divide chopped shallots over the fillets and sprinkle each one with salt and pepper then drizzle each with olive oil. Divide butter into 4 thin slices and place on each fillet.

Adjust oven rack 3-4 inches from source of heat and preheat broiler.

2. Place salmon fillets under the broiler for 3 – 4 minutes. Remove and sprinkle on lemon juice. Return to broiler and cook 3 minutes longer for medium. The fillets will be slightly pink at the center. If you would like it a little more done cook for another minute or two.

SOY AND SAKE PAN ROASTED SALMON

Soy and sake gives this succulent salmon dish an appealing glaze

Serves 4

1 1/2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 1/2 tablespoons sake
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons thinly sliced scallions
1 tablespoon freshly grated ginger
4 lemon slices
1 1/4 pound center cut salmon, skin removed
2 tablespoons peanut or canola oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste, optional

1.Pour soy and sake into a small saucepan then stir in sugar, scallions and ginger. Place over medium-low heat, bring to a simmer and stir to dissolve the sugar. Remove from heat and let cool. When completely cooled put in the lemon slices.

2. Cut the fillet into even-size boneless steaks, about 6 ounces each. Place in a non-reactive dish large enough to hold them in a single layer. Pour over the cooled marinade and let rest up to 1 hour at room temperature.

3. Warm a sturdy non-stick skillet and put in the oil. When the pan and oil are hot, but not smoking put in the fillets skinned-side up. Sear the fish over medium heat for 3 minutes, turn with fish spatula and sear other side for 3 minutes longer. I prefer to slightly undercook salmon to a rosy pink interior. Test for doneness by poking a finger in the thickest part of the steaks, it should be slightly soft for medium rare or springy to the touch for medium. Cook the fillets a couple minutes longer if you prefer the fish well done. Season lightly with salt and pepper to your taste. Spoon over pan juices, top each with a lemon slice and serve.

DULCE DE LECHE

You just know it's something sweet!

Yields: 2 cups dulce de leche sauce

1 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
Preheat oven to 350 degrees

1. With a rubber spatula scrape condensed milk into a Pyrex pie plate and tightly cover with foil. Set the plate in a water bath and place in preheated oven. Bake for 1 1/2 hours. After one hour uncover and stir the mixture. Return to oven and bake 30 minutes longer until the sauce is a caramel color. Serve when cool or refrigerate ahead. Add droplets of warm water and stir with a fork to loosen the mixture. Serve over ice cream or fruit.

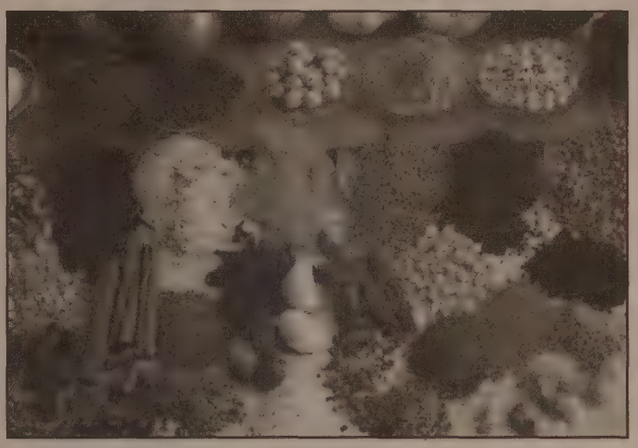
Dining in the Hamptons

Sugar and Spice And Everything Nice

It is said that little girls are made of sugar and spice and everything nice. So too, I have found, are many desserts. Indeed, I daresay, desserts are easier to make than are little girls, as it is not necessary to use everything nice; a mere few nice things will suffice.

That spices – dully defined in my dictionary as "pungent aromatic plant substances, such as nutmeg, used to flavor foods or beverages" – should combine so well with sugar may not be obvious. Many of us associate spices with savory dishes involving meats and vegetables. Sure, sweet nutmeg and cinnamon are notable exceptions, but how many other items in your spice rack would you dare to add to an ice cream or cake? Believe it or not, if your answer is anything other than "almost all of them," you are missing out.



This should not really come as a surprise. Think about it: many savory recipes call for the addition of sweet flavors, such as balsamic vinegar or even orange juice. So why should sweet recipes not enjoy the benefits of a more savory flavor, such as pepper or cardamom?

Let us begin with ice cream, the perfect vehicle to carry virtually any flavor. Ice cream, at its most basic, is frozen custard. Additional ingredients are then added to bring the already sweet, rich and creamy concoction to another level. Given that we already add coffee and nuts to ice cream (hardly sweet additions), and the Chinese add green tea, it should not be a leap to add spices. And not just the sweeter spices, like cinnamon and nutmeg, but savory spices such as coriander and black pepper.

Black pepper ice cream? Have I gone mad? Perhaps, but in her cookbook on desserts, Claudia Flemming of Gramercy Tavern has a recipe for just that. And one of the best ice creams I have ever served at a dinner party came from Jean-Georges Vongerichten's cookbook. It is a spice ice cream using cinnamon, mace, nutmeg, pepper and coriander, but it also suggests that any other spices would do just fine as well. I did not have mace on hand, so I used cloves instead. It was outstanding.

Moreover, as Flemming notes, spices are used throughout her entire cookbook of desserts because they add texture, flavor and sense of temperature, and in one chapter, entitled "spices," they are the star attraction. She offers up sugar and spice doughnuts, made with mace, cinnamon and cardamom; a Guinness stout ginger cake made with cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and cardamom; and delicate tuiles made with pink and black peppercorns.

To get you started on something simple, here is Flemming's black pepper ice cream. Successfully making a custard without curdling the eggs takes a bit of practice (at least it did for me), but once you get the hang of it, it becomes second nature. I should note that recipes for base custard vary from chef to chef. Flemming uses milk and cream at a 3-to-1 ratio, while Jean-George uses only milk; they both use 6 egg yolks per pint. Other chefs have other combinations. Feel free to experiment, as it is a question of taste. Also, Flemming's dessert recipes are notable in that they often require a pinch of salt. I agree: salt's magical ability to bring together flavors remains just as important during dessert.

Black Pepper Ice Cream (1 pint)
1-1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup cream
1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
6 large egg yolks
1/2 generous tablespoon black peppercorns
Pinch of salt

Whisk together the egg yolks and the 2 tablespoons of sugar until the sugar is fully incorporated. Combine the milk, cream and 1/2 cup sugar in a heavy saucepan, bring to a simmer over medium heat, and then remove from heat. Using a measuring cup or ladle, add some of the milk mixture into the egg mixture in a slow stream, constantly whisking the egg mixture as you do so. This essential step "tempers" the egg mixture, so it will not be so shocked when it is added to the much warmer milk mixture. Then, add the egg mixture back into the milk mixture, again in a slow stream, whisking the milk mixture constantly.

Place the pot over low heat, and stir constantly with a wooden spoon. After about five minutes or so, the egg/milk mixture will thicken, so that it coats the back of the spoon and you can draw a line in it with your finger. This is the base custard. Remove it from the heat and strain into a bowl.

Crush the peppercorns, perhaps using the back of a spoon against a cutting board. Stir the peppercorns and pinch of salt into the custard. Cover and chill in the refrigerator at least four hours. Once chilled, strain the custard again, and then freeze in an ice cream maker, according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Coming next week: Snakes and snails and puppy dog tails – it's what's for dinner!

Moms through the ages

You've got about a week to ponder and procrastinate, plan and panic, shop and research. But for what? Don't know the answer? Then no offense, but you've been walking around with your eyes and ears shut for the last month. One can't turn on the TV, open a newspaper, magazine, or listen to the radio without a barrage of advertising in anticipation of May 14th – Mother's Day, Although it has become a marketer's dream, with companies vying for your attention, assuring you that your mom simply can't live without whatever product they happen to be flogging, there is something to be said for Mother's Day, those 24 hours when we all have the opportunity to honor and recognize probably the single most important person in our lives. For that reason alone and not because the media tells us to, it's worth taking time out to make your Mother's Day special this year.

We're swimming in ideas and suggestions, but what would really make Mom's day and how do we not sink in all the information and product placement we're being sold?

I've got a few ideas and to make it easier, I've narrowed down to age groups.

Following young Hollywood's lead, there's a rise in new moms in their 20s of late, Britney Spears included. So, for twenty-something moms, how about Britney Spears' Fantasy Mother's Day Gift Set. $52.50. Teaming up with Elizabeth Arden, Spears has released a limited edition pink bag with fun metal accents with every purchase of her fragrance, Fantasy. The stylish bag can even double as a diaper bag (www.macys.com). Also fun for a 20 something mom is Pop Make-up, with its bright and risk taking colors –bright and breezy, hopefully the epitome of a twenty-something mom. Get it at Sephora.

Moms in their 30s might have a career, as well as a baby, or three. More than one rug rat takes a lot of coordinating, career or not. So moms in this age group really need their own day. Moms in their 30s are still very with it and so anything fashion forward would be a good idea for them. But age appropriate. If you're not sure, bags and shoes are always great accents and fun even if the ladies are still trying to get rid of baby weight. Or a gift certificate to their favorite store. However, when I think of a 30-something mom, I imagine that what they really need the most is rest and relaxation. So a trip to the Spa might just be the ticket. A little pampering from those nearest and dearest until they get there might not be a bad idea, either – breakfast in bed anyone?

Even though 40 is the new 30 (no, really) skin that's been around for 40 years might not have heard all the hype and so many forty-somethings are just starting to get concerned about aging skin. My favorite skin care brand is Clarins. 40-somethings might appreciate the Intensive Age Control Brightening Program from Clarins. The gift set incorporates 21 days to firmer, brighter, younger-looking skin! ($140). A little pampering with Rogers & Gallet Blue Lotus perfumed soap will also brighten all skin. The Blue Lotus flower has been sacred since the time of Ancient Egypt and is believed to hold magical powers – perhaps it will fool 40-year-old skin into believing that it really is 30.

The 50s are an exciting period for moms, with some even transitioning into grandmothers. Weekend is a new magazine that celebrates the best times in life, and a subscription is the perfect gift for women who are getting used to living at home, perhaps without children, or living with older more independent ones at least. Whether at home or away, the magazine offers inspiring ideas that will help moms (and dads) get the most out of the time they now call their own. A ten-issue subscription to Weekend is available now at weekendmag.com for only $9.95.

60s and beyond. Every Mom loves to receive flowers, but this year, how about something a little different, something special, stunning, unique and unusual – just like Mom. Get moms of any age, young or old, an orchid from www.orchids.com They come in all types and price ranges and can be sent nationally.

Last but not least, what all moms really need on Mother's Day and thereafter, is a phone call, a visit, a smile, and a hug. Then four special little words.....

I love you Mum! (Or the American version, Mom).

Stone Path To Nowhere

Whether you live in the woods, have immaculate lawns, sand dunes or any combination of the three, stone paths add a great deal of beauty to your property. The obvious places for paths are from the driveway to the house, the house to the pool, and the house to the beach (if you are so lucky), but stone paths are also great when they lead to nowhere. Well, not exactly nowhere. Paths can add depth and distance to your property. They can become focal points, and lead to relaxing alcoves hidden among tall grasses, clearings in the woods, and sunken gardens.

If you own a wooded piece of property, now is the time to install a path. Survey your property, look for a natural clearing in the woods. Begin to mark out an "S" shaped path among the trees, from your home leading to a clearing. Trim branches that may interfere with the path. In the clearing you can either build a stone bench (four logs as legs and a slab of slate or field stone) or purchase one and install it.

The best way to lay out a curving stone path is with garden hose. It sounds odd, but the hose will take to curves a lot better than twine. Large rope also works well, if you don't have any hose around. When designing the path, especially with a smaller piece of property, make the path wind back and forth. This gives the appearance of more property. Plant some pine trees between the curves to block sight of the destination and prevent people from cutting through the woods to the bench. In a wooded path, most people would suggest using some sort of chipped stone, but I still prefer large slabs of fieldstone, slate, or limestone, but it's really up to you.

If you have a large well-manicured lawn that sprawls out from one hedgerow to the other, with nothing in between, a path to a distant arbor or table and chairs can enhance the perception of length on your property. It's a rather simple concept based on a vanishing point. If you stare down a straight highway, the farther down you look the more narrow the highway seems to become, right? The truth is, the highway doesn't get any narrower; it is just an illusion. When building a path to a distant object on your lawn, you are going to want to take this illusion and make it real. If you are building a straight path, find the center of your starting point, and the center of the end point of the path (we'll say it's an arbor). Measure an equal distance on each side of the center stake at the arbor, say one foot on each side. Set up stakes at that distance and run twine back to the starting place. Measure a foot and a half to two feet on each side of the center stake and place outer stakes, and tying off the twine. Look back toward the arbor, the vanishing point is supposed to look natural. So if the distances you have laid out seem too long, move them closer or farther from center, but keep the distances from center equal on each side. Once you have a natural looking vanishing point, begin to lay the stones, using the twine as guides. To add to this effect, have the arbor taper off at the same angle as the path. (note: this effect only works one way, and, in fact, has the opposite effect when looking from the arbor to the start of the path).

Another option for a sprawling lawn is a labyrinth or serenity path. I know the word labyrinth drums up thoughts of dragons and danger, but today's labyrinth simply implies a spiraling path. These paths can have as many levels as you'd like, but try to have at least three. Place high grasses or shrubbery along the path, creating a screen. In the center place a chair, bench or table and chairs. Planting lavender or honeysuckle will add beautiful scents, which will make the place even more enjoyable.

Paths shouldn't simply be utilitarian. Take some time and map out some ideas on how to incorporate paths in your yard, because even a path to nowhere will take you someplace special.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Summer Dependability

Each year, one of the favorite garden plants is the begonia. There are annual introductions of new hybrids, and the overall quality and beauty of these plants seems to improve. Begonias can provide an assortment of beautiful, large flowers and leaves that are suitable for flowerbeds, hanging baskets, container specimens, and for use as houseplants. They grow easily in either shade or partial sun. Full sun tends to burn the leaves and stunt growth of these plants.

I am particularly fond of the tuberous begonias – with their large, vivid flowers and multiple configurations, yet those grown for their colorful leaves that have small inconspicuous flowers are equally beautiful. These plants provide years of enjoyment provided they are pruned and deadheaded.

Begonias belong to the Begoniaceae family of plants, and probably originated in tropical and sub-tropical climates. Brazil is considered one of the more important origins for begonias. There are two distinct types: semperflorens and tuberous. A third, perennial type of begonia is considered of lesser importance.

The semperflorens begonias are the most common. This type of begonia includes those classified as fibrous, waxy, and ever-blooming. They are usually grown as annuals in the Northeast. This type of begonia is readily sold in nurseries and floral shops and include the bedding begonias – which are more about leaves than flowers. Starting semperflorens begonias from seed is time-consuming and frustrating, so we recommend buying seedlings.

Among the semperflorens begonias are various sizes and colors. Colors are in red, white, yellow, salmon, and pink. The flowers are typically small and have a bright yellow center, and grow compact, dense foliage to about one foot tall. The beautiful, waxy leaves are the reason to grow these begonias, and they come in shades of green, bronze, and chocolate.

Tuberous begonias, the second type, are also grown as annuals. These plants emerge from a central, concave tuber that is best planted just below the surface of soil. As they grow, these begonias produce handsome, beautifully colored leaves and large, gorgeous flowers in a variety of petal shapes. Some of the tuberous begonias may be upright, others pendulous and hanging. The tuberous begonias include those that produce large, variegated leaves. One variety, the painted-leaf begonia, produces heart-shaped leaves up to 12 inches in length and about six inches wide. The leaves show striking patterns and colors of red, black, silver, and green. Tuberous begonias may attain heights of up to about 14 inches and may be as wide as 18 inches.

Regardless of type, begonias prefer rich, loose, and fertile soil with excellent drainage. We have found a soil mixture that combines peat, vermiculite, and compost works very well. The semperflorens begonias like to be drenched with water and then to dry out. Tuberous begonias prefer to be kept moist at all times. However, you must keep from over watering either type, which is the main danger and the primary cause of rotting stems on these plants.

It is best to water begonias from beneath if at all possible. An occasional dousing with a light, fish emulsion fertilizer every four-to-six weeks helps to produce vigorous plants and vivid flowers/colors.

All begonias require some maintenance to do well. Dead flowers, leaves, and elongating stems should be removed to maintain plant vigor and appearance. For appearance's sake, pinch off extra or too-long stems as the plant develops. Keep only the strongest stems. Large-flowered begonias look best with fewer, large flowers, so pinch off early developing flowers to retain only the largest blossoms. As stems grow longer, they need to be trimmed to retain the plant's compact shape. This care helps the plants thrive and guarantees continuing blooms and lush foliage.

As fall comes, begonias can be brought indoors. Place in a well-ventilated room near a window where they will receive at least six hours of light a day. Hold back a little on the water and prune back the stems to invigorate new growth. As the plants adjust to the new conditions, they will send up new leaves and flowers for a wonderful winter display. Many begonias brought indoors will last through the winter and can be re-planted in the garden the following year.

Because of the variety and beautiful colors or leaves and flowers, begonias are an excellent plant to include in the landscape. Their relative inexpensive cost and easy response to care makes them an ideal plant to include in the summer landscape – and beyond!

A Little Bit Country, A Little Bit Modern

Summer is coming and the place is getting ready to wake up from its winter hibernation. Construction crews are everywhere, updating the beautiful homes in our area. Driving down Dune Road you can't help but marvel at the creativity in the design. Some opt for a modern touch and sleek style. Others simply go with that beachy, country look where you almost expect to walk in and smell the aroma of baked goods. Whatever your style, whatever your tastes, it's all about detail and design from your living room right down to your kitchen. So if you're doing a little updating this year, the kitchen is a great place to start. Are you a country person or a bit more of a city slicker?

If you're a little bit country, then this kitchen type is for you. Inspired by the millwork and patterns of the past, country kitchens are timeless and inviting. From the minute you walk into one you have the urge for homemade apple pie and expect the smell of cinnamon to be wafting through the room. This type of kitchen style is great for families with children. The fabrics used in the cushions are generally made of soft, delicate patterns that wear well and can hide that "uh oh" stain. If you are going for the American country look you may need to revamp your cabinets. Generally they will be a flat wood with minor detailing to represent the millwork of the time. The cabinets are constructed of pine or other light-toned woods. Everything in a country style kitchen is oversized, representing the time when furniture was gently hand-carved and not factory produced in mass.

If you are looking for a French country look the lines and angles of your cabinets and furniture will be smoother and you'd go for lighter varnished wood. You might opt for Limestone countertops to complete the look. If you prefer to turn your kitchen into a replica of Tuscany, paint your furniture in assorted hues, darken the wood in your kitchen and use chicken wire and metal in your cabinets. A Tuscan country kitchen could also feature a huge sink made of stone.

If you prefer sleek and modern, skip any country touches. A modern kitchen has all the state of the art appliances, latest gadgets and cookware. You can instantly visualize the Two Hamptons Chefs preparing for their latest event in a modern kitchen. Modern kitchens are generally clutter free. Pots and pans are suspended from your ceiling. Modern kitchens are bathed in soft light. The skylight may be centered over the kitchen island to allow the morning sun to shine through when preparing those omelets.

Modern kitchens often have recessed-ceiling lights and under-cabinet lights. Halogen lights are often used and seem to provide the best lighting. Windows in a modern kitchen are kept free of blinds or shades to allow even more light to pass through. As far as cabinets go, the look calls for sleek clean lines with not much in the way of intricate patterns or hardware (knobs, handles, etc). The doors can be opaque glass or colorful veneers.

Appliances are often dark in color or in a sleek one-color effect all over. Refrigerators look great in stainless steel or with clear doors which to allow you to view all the delicacies that are waiting to be devoured. Furniture in a modern kitchen is kept to a minimum. Breakfast may be served at the island while sitting on a barstool or you may opt to enjoy your meal at a retro inspired table and chair set decorated with a vase and a single flower. Your stove, coffee maker and food processor are state of the art and color-coordinated. Don't forget to get an Espresso Maker! Bosch's Benevenuto B-30 Fully Automatic Espresso Coffee Machine does it all. It grinds, steams, cooks, reheats and stores the beans. It's the latest in espresso technology and would go great in your kitchen. Everything you need is within easy reach or sight within this contemporary room. If this all sounds good, modern is the way to go for you.

Whether you're a little bit country, or a little bit city slicker, your home is your castle. So have it designed with your tastes in mind and invite us over for dinner. We'd love to check out what you've done to your kitchen!

Discovering Your Heritage

Jim Gleason's love of woodworking was passed on to him from his grandfather and great-grandfather who were both master craftsmen who built and renovated many homes on the pastoral East End of Long Island. He spent the summers of his youth in his grandfather's workshop learning his trade. As a young man, he began his own business as a specialty carpenter servicing customers across Long Island. Like his grandfather and his father before him, Jim believes that the ambience of a home is created in the details – the special touches that say something about the homeowners and the way they view life. As more of his customers expressed a desire to incorporate unique and distinctive architectural elements in their homes, the idea for Heritage Wide Plank Flooring was born. Today, Jim and his team at Heritage custom mill wide-plank flooring for homeowners, architects, designers and builders on Long Island and nationwide.

Ash, Cherry, Walnut, Hickory, Heart Pine, Maple, Birch and more in either a natural tung oil finish

Wide-plank flooring dates back to colonial America. At that time mass production and a need for uniformity did not exist. The entire log was used so that no material went to waste. The widest boards were cut from the center of the tree and gradually narrower cuts were taken from the outer circumference. The widths and lengths of the floorboards highlight the nuances of the wood and create a natural beauty that cannot be duplicated with the narrow strip floors that are more commonly seen today.

Original wide-plank flooring can be found in historic structures throughout this country from old ranches in the Mid-West to Saltbox homes in New England and Antebellum mansions in the South. The fact that these floors still exist after 200 years is a testament to the durability of the wood and the skill of those carpenters of long ago. At Heritage, they strive to follow in the same spirit and tradition. Every floor they mill is handcrafted on site at a facility in Baiting Hollow. They use only the highest quality, old growth, American Pines and hardwoods in widths up to 20 inches and lengths up to 16 feet. They also mill reclaimed Antique Pine, Oak, Hickory and Chestnut in widths up to 12 inches for customers who want a truly one-of-a-kind floor.

While Heritage focuses on capturing the beauty of this nearly-lost architectural gem, quality is an equal concern. All of their flooring is carefully air dried and then slowly kiln dried to achieve optimal moisture content, a process that ensures maximum stability in the finished floor. Wood that is not properly dried will result in shrinkage or swelling in the floorboards that can lead to cracking or warping. Heritage stands behind their flooring by giving their customers a lifetime guarantee to replace any floor that is defective due to the quality of their wood or their milling process. By blending fine craftsmanship, top quality materials and state-of-the-art technology, Heritage delivers everything they promise, believing that a satisfied customer is their greatest asset.

What started with humble beginnings has grown to a company with a client-base that spans across the United States and into Europe. Much of their success comes from providing personalized service. They work one on one with customers from the selection and design process through to the installation and finishing of the floor. They provide complimentary samples in species such as or a variety of stains to help their customers create the look they want to achieve. To further customize your home, Heritage also mills wall and ceiling panels, as well as decorative beams and stair components to complement your flooring. In addition, deliveries on Long Island and the surrounding tri-state area are made free of charge with every effort made to accommodate each customer's schedule.

Few things can parallel the beauty, warmth and elegance of authentic wide-plank flooring when it comes to making your home inviting and welcoming. With a floor crafted by Heritage you will be creating a legacy that will stand the test of time and will be enjoyed for generations to come.

East Hampton Point for Sale : $55,000,000

Do you think, as did I, that East Hampton Point is largely made up of a restaurant and some rooms? If so, your eyes are probably bulging as you read the list price of $55 million for the resort, which is for sale. Nestled on Three Mile Harbor not far from the Springs area, East Hampton Point's five acres offer a little something for everyone, including boaters looking for somewhere other than Sag Harbor to dock. Whether it all adds up to $55 million only the market can tell, but I certainly enjoyed my tour of the property. The tour, for real estate agents with super-wealthy customers and this paper, was organized so that we arrived at the well-known restaurant last.

A Cottage at East Hampton Poin

We started at the pier. East Hampton Point has slips to accommodate as many as 58 boats, although some of the slips are set up in pairs to allow for extra-large boats. When you dock your boat at one of the slips, an unassuming building awaits you. None of the land lubbers will bother you there, as it exists solely for men of the sea to share their tales, both tall and small. If you need supplies for your boat, such as milk and butter, they are on offer here. And a TV awaits, so you can hear the pedestrian news reports, so much on the minds of those poor souls who dare not travel the seas. You might even take a nap in this building, although I am quite sure your quarters on the boat are more than satisfactory.

Light years, and yet only steps, away is the Palmer House, where powerful denizens of the land live in luxury, knowing nothing of the people of the sea in that aluminum building which does not beckon. The Palmer House, decorated in the English Country Manor style, is the crown jewel of East Hampton Point's inn, with seven bedrooms and two sitting rooms with wet bars. The sitting rooms can be attached to certain bedrooms to create suites, or kept as separate areas. Plasma TVs, fireplaces and terraces await the weary traveler. Although the Palmer House rooms are available individually, people of discerning taste will opt to take the entire House. But please do not leave your wallet at home, for the Palmer House will cost you $4,785 per night during the summer season.

To those poor souls who cannot afford the Palmer House and yet will not be arriving by boat, I say: never fear. Awaiting you are any of 14 cottages, ranging from single level, one-bedroom units to duplex, two-bedroom units. Some have Jacuzzis, some have sleep-sofas, some have full kitchens, and some even have plasma TVs. And because of the minimum income level required to read this paper, I know you can afford at least some of these cottages, ranging from $450 to $895 per night during the season.

For all guests, there is a small pool hidden within trees, like an oasis, as well as tennis, a gym and a children's playground. But however impressive the marina or the Palmer House or the cottages or the amenities may be, it is the restaurant that captures the imagination. Facing west over Three Mile Harbor, the two-level restaurant transports its diners away from the problems of the world as the sun sets gently below the horizon. Our tour ended at the restaurant's grand bar, where I took in the atmosphere and admired the 5.5-meter racer Jade while sipping on a glass of white wine.

Yes, I thought, I can live like this. And to think, with $4 in my wallet right now, all I need is $54,999,996.

TO GO OR NOT TO GO?
Dear Dan,

I read your story African Journey, and I've gotta say, you're pretty brave. I'm a big animal lover, but I'm not so sure about getting two feet away from one that could bite my head off. I imagine you just freeze with fear.

But, the two things that frazzle me the most are the idea of going in a single engine rickety old plane on a runway with a wild animal crossing, and the thought of watching animals hurting other animals. (Those Meerkats are adorable. They look like cartoon characters.)

I always seek the ultimate adventure, so I'm sure we will be going soon, too. Before I get too old to RUN, away.

Thanks. Enjoy spring!

PLEASE HELP
Dear Dan,

My name is Alyssa Sardone and I'm in the sixth grade. I need help from Dan's Papers because people all over the "East End" and even New York City read your paper. I am involved in Relay of the Hamptons. It will be on June 9, from 5 p.m. to 5 a.m. This is an overnight event to raise funds and awareness for the American Cancer Society. It is being held in only eight weeks at the Hampton Bays High School. So far we only have sixteen teams. This isn't even close to the goal of 100 set by Karen Hurst (the coordinator and a survivor.) The donation goal is $100,000. So far I have raised $2,709 and the event total raised is about $11,000. Bocaccini's Pizzeria in Hampton Bays says they'll match up to $3,000. I'll be there soon! Although I was recently interviewed by the Southampton Press, Relay of the Hamptons needs much more good press.....free advertising.....sponsors.

Something.....anything would be appreciated. People in Southampton, East Hampton, Springs, Amagansett, Montauk, etc. don't know about this important event and we need them to help us reach $100,000 and to help save lives like my sisters. Can you help me and a good cause?

You can contact me at home at 595-1245 or my mom's cell at 766-2890. You can check out my site at the American Cancer Society at this address:

Thank you.

ATTORNEY ON BOARD
Dear Dan,

I would like to volunteer to serve as legal counsel for the SIBTA. I would consider it an honor. I have two principal qualifications for the position. First, I am a proud holder of a Cape Cod Canal tunnel residents permit. You can inspect it on the bumper of my 1980 jeep CJ-7, parked in my driveway at 40 South Midway Road. Second, I'm the one who collided with the ferry in Greenport about twelve years ago while pulling away from Prestons in my sailboat.

Those ferries are a menace. They must be eliminated.

I promise not to run into the tunnel.

Please advise if you require my services.

A PICTURE WORTH A THOUSAND .....
Dear Dan,

I look forward to each weekly cover of Dan's Papers.

This week, the photo of Tom's Liquor Store on page 27 grabbed my attention. It was reminiscent of Edward Hopper's "Early Sunday Morning", which always invokes a nostalgia for the city I left many years ago.

I'd like to see Tom's Liquor Store and the photographer make a hit at one of the many galleries available in the Hamptons.

COPY CAT AND LIONS AND TIGERS AND.....
Dear Dan,

I really enjoyed African Journey and would like to duplicate the trip. Would you be kind enough to let me know the travel agent you used?

Thanks and best regards.

IN ALL SERIOUSNESS
Dear Dan,

Concerning your article about the Pickleworks Wreck, the American statesman Hamilton Fish (1808-93) did not die in the accident, but Harold L. Fish, a prominent stockbroker, was a fatality. There were six deaths in the train wreck, not "only one," and scores were seriously injured. The derailment occurred on August 13, not August 14, 1926.

"Fish Killed at Pickleworks" was not used as a headline in any story that the Brooklyn Daily Eagle ran about the wreck. The newspaper did not go "defunct" shortly after the accident, but continued publishing until 1938 when it became the Brooklyn Eagle. Copies of the Eagle have not been lost, but are available on microfilm at major colleges and libraries.

Finally, do you think that the young woman who had one of her legs amputated as a result of the accident would have found "something very funny about the circumstances"? Do you believe that the man who buried his wife and two infant children following the wreck would have found it "hard to keep from laughing"?

Kenneth Brady
Port Jefferson

This was a major error on my part. I wrote it from memory, with the intention of having it fact checked by my editors, then went on vacation, came back, forgot to do it and ran it. Oops. –DR

SAY WHAT?
Dear Dan,

The special edition highlighting my home town of Sayville was glorious! (And thanks for the great review by the way!) However, we are going to have a hard time staying "the best kept secret on Long Island" if this keeps up!

Police Blotter

Left Keys In Truck

A green pickup truck was stolen in Bridgehampton and was later found on County Road 39 in Southampton. The owner of the truck reported having left his keys in the truck when it was stolen. Police told the man to not leave his keys in the truck when he parks it in the future. They also told him that they couldn't believe how much he pays to fill it up with gas.

Rock Thrown

Somebody threw a rock at a man's parked car in East Hampton and smashed the window. Nothing was stolen, but the man did say that it was going to cost $500 to fix the broken window. After filling out the police report the officer on the scene was reported saying, "Well, that really stinks."

Mack Dodge

A woman in East Hampton told police that a Mack truck almost hit her while it was backing up. The woman was able to dodge the truck by stepping out of the way. Police advised the woman to not stand behind giant Mack trucks when they are moving in reverse.

A Gentlemen's Fight

A "minor altercation" broke out on Main Street in East Hampton around midnight. Police on the scene broke up the fight. Neither man was seriously injured and no charges were filed as both men agreed to go their separate ways. That's how we handle fights in the Hamptons, no lawyers, no suing, just good old-fashioned ass kicking and then saying a respectful "#$%# you!"

Tire Fire

Firemen had to extinguish a tire on a car that had caught fire on Race Lane in East Hampton. The firemen sped to the scene after they got the call. There is no indication of whether or not the tire on fire had to do with the car being a NASCAR vehicle.

Lost License Plates

A man who lives on Three Mile Harbor Road told police that he had lost both of his license plates somewhere in the village a month before. Police asked him if he checked underneath his bed.

A Restaurant Walk Out

An unhappy couple decided that they were not going to pay for their take-out food because they were unhappy with the order and walked out of the restaurant. The manager of the restaurant called the police, who responded to the call and found that the couple had left their cell phone behind. Police took the cell phone. They are not planning on returning it, claiming finder's keepers.

Missing Bikes

Two bicycles were missing from the beach at Peter's Pond Lane in Sagaponack. The bikes were reportedly left at the beach by the garbage cans. The owners of the bikes are thinking that maybe the garbage man thought that the bicycles were garbage. In a related story, two local garbage men have opened up a bicycle shop in East Hampton.

Stolen Deer Head

A man in Springs reported to police that somebody stole $1000 and a mounted deer head from his home. Estimates on the cost of a mounted deer head have not been determined by police. Police have volunteered to go hunting with the man so that he can replace his mounted deer head.

IT'S TIME TO PAY OFF EQUITY LOANS AND LOWER MORTGAGE PAYMENTS BY 45%

Recent increases in the prime rate have homeowners scrambling to consolidate high rate home equity loans and lines of credit.

Many took out these loans when banks were pushing them as a replacement for conventional mortgages and enticing consumers with no closing cost teasers. Well, now it's time to anti up.

"Equity loans should not be used for long term financing" says John Sauro, President of North Atlantic Mortgage Corp. "It's likely the prime rate will increase another half percent before years end, pushing homeowner's payments even higher"

So what should you do?

Many have decided to refinance their first mortgage and the equity loan into one mortgage while rates are still low. "You can still get a great rate and there are programs available that can considerably lower monthly payments. A five minute consultation could result in significant savings."

For more information or to receive a Free Report on this and other financing strategies call North Atlantic Mortgage at:

WHERE AM I?

I led the way through the luxury gourmet kitchen and set my sunglasses down on the cool blue pearl granite countertop. The light bouncing from the glass mosaic tile gave the room an ultra chic and dreamy feeling. Past the Thermador, Dacor and Bosch appliances to one of the four bedrooms beyond.....
Later, hmmmm...so many bathrooms to choose from but I must have a steam and I must be surrounded by all the wonderful natural materials that Mother Earth has offered up to this temple of exquisite taste - will it be slate, will it be stone, and what about marble...No need to chose, it's all here. Mademoiselle Kohler, may I introduce Mr. Toto. Make yourself at home, my dear, in the tranquility room and we'll meet outside for lunch around one-ish.
Oh what a meal, served, if I do say so myself, with my usual panache in such beautiful surroundings. The Veuve chilled to perfection in the wine cellar. A splash in the heated gunite pool and a lovely long nap on the mahogany deck. Sunset drinks on the rooftop deck looking over the magnificent landscaping and those water views! Big puffy clouds make the most stunning sunsets but my tan needs a top up before I hit the private, resident's only beach tomorrow. Whoever said that a tanning bed at home was "de trop" clearly didn't have a clue.
After dinner, just a short hop away at Nick and Toni's, we'll relax a little more, perhaps by the light of the outdoor fireplace: I'll fix our nightcaps at the wet bar as we head to the screening room for a very private viewing of the nominated films.

WHERE AM I?

Well, watch this space for where to be on Saturday May 13th between 1 and 4 pm.
